VETERINARY CORPS NEEDS LARGER FORCE TO CARRY ON ITS WORK.

The appalling loss of horses and mules in war time can be traced to the lack of adequate care during campaigns.

The feeding and caring for animals with an army in the field was not really inaugurated until after 1900. Since then the lot of the horse has been greatly improved. During the war in South Africa, Great Britain lost 325,000 horses, 51,000 mules and 195,000 oxen, the great majority of this appalling loss, authorities have stated, being due to insufficient feeding and overwork.

It is known that during the Civil War the animal losses rose to a high figure. The war with Spain was short and the loss in 1898 was not so formidable, although unnecessarily high.

During the World War the United States possessed practically 400,000 animals, 192,000 of which were with the A. E. F. As yet no figures are available as to the actual loss, but it can be said on good authority that due to the great work of the Veterinary Corps the government was saved thousands of dollars. With the returning home of the A. E. F. the horses were gradually disposed of. On Jan. 1, 1919, the American Army in Europe possessed 192,000 animals, which number was reduced to 18,280 on Sept. 1 of that year. During this interval approximately 10,933 entered veterinary hospitals and 17,723 were otherwise disposed of.

At present the Army has approximately 55,000 horses, which are all seasoned animals. They are neither young nor old, but in their prime and are good for two or three years. The present death and sick rate is decidedly low and is improving all the time, due to the constant attention of the Veterinary Corps in its supervision over animals of Cavalry and Field Artillery organizations and remount depots. Better service could be supplied by the corps if Congress would authorize a slight increase in both the officers and enlisted personnel.

It is hoped that Congress will see the need of an adequate Veterinary Corps and thus provide sufficient funds for its operation. It is only through an adequate personnel advising with and instructing both officers and men of the various horse-drawn Army organizations that a repetition of such appalling losses of equine life in past wars can be averted in the future. That Congress will recognize the fact that efficient instructors should be assigned to all National Guard units in the care of animals is also hoped by the leaders in this movement.

SIGNAL CORPS SENDS MESSAGE BY SIX COMMUNICATION METHODS.

For the purpose of demonstrating the rapidity and efficiency of the various modern means of communication employed by the Signal Corps, U.S. Army, a test message, reading as follows: "Over the land, under the sea and through the ether, this message is transmitted by the Signal Corps—Texas to the Arctic Circle and return," was sent to Major Gen. John L. Hines, 8th Corps Area commander, by the signal officer, 8th Corps Area, Col. D. J. Carr, Signal Corps, on April 13, 1922, the

BRITISH TAKING LESSONS FROM BATTLE OF JUTLAND.

As a result of experiences at the battle of Jutland, and on other occasions, it was established that the larger British warships equipped with turrets were more liable than German warships to magazine fires caused by the passage of flame down the trunks between the turrets and the ammunition rooms.

The Engineer of London of May 12 states that to devise means to prevent such flashing, while not impeding the free passage upwards of the ammunition, is not an easy task. Numerous proposals to meet the requirement have, however, been submitted to the Admiralty and certain of them are now being tested on the old battleship Superb at Portsmouth. There is no intention of sinking the vessel in the course of the experiments. Light guns only are being used with a small amount of loose cordite at the foot of the ammunition trunk, so that any explosion that may be caused will not be sufficient seriously to damage the vessel.

NATIONAL GUARD OFFICER PRAISES ARMY MEDICAL SCHOOL.

Capt. E. D. Wall, Med. Corps, Arkansas National Guard, Marianna, who was selected by the Secretary of War as one of six National Guard Medical officers throughout the entire United States to take a special course of instruction at the Army Medical Field Service School, Carlisle, Pa., has rendered a complete and interesting report of the course to The Adjutant General of Arkansas.

In this report Captain Wall sets forth the effort on the part of the War Department, through the application of the new national military policy, to overcome the old condition of unpreparedness which through the lack of proper provision by Congress, has always resulted in enormous extravagance in preparation when an emergency arises, aside from useless loss of life. The purpose of the special courses at the school, which Captain Wall describes in detail, is to develop efficient instructors in Medical Department duties and surgeons and sanitary inspectors for higher tactical units. Many improved methods and appliances advanced by the instructors, Captain Wall says, have been adopted, and the nation, he says, will be everlastingly indebted to them.

All theories are taught by practical demonstration, and in order that every phase of the work may be thoroughly understood, the student actually puts into effect everything that is taught. There are 600 demonstration troops, and each man is a well-trained attaché of the school. All the efforts of the institution, Captain Wall states, are to improve on all methods used in the Medical Department of the Army wherever possible.

Captain Wall pays a high tribute to Col. P. M. Ashburn, Med. Corps, commander of the school, who is a recognized authority on a wide range of medical subjects, and also to his able corps of instructors, some fifty in number, which Captain Wall says are all men of ability to do real constructive work and to teach others.

In describing the excellent work of the instructors at the school Captain Wall mentions Major John P. Fletcher, "a mechanical genius as well as a physician," who has charge of equipment and transportation; Capt. Herbert W. Taylor, in charge of the Department of Military Art; Major Joseph E. Bastion, in charge of Enlisted Training; Capt. J. H. Blackwell, T. G. Touney and L. K. Patterson; Major M. C. Stayer, in charge of the Department of Hygiene and Sanitation.

He also mentions the valuable course of lectures delivered by Col. E. L. Munson, Col. A. N. Stark and Brig. Gen. W. D. McCaw, and Major J. F. Bresnahan.

Captain Wall, who is one of the leading physicians and surgeons of Eastern Arkansas, and served in the Medical Department of the Army during the World War, also paid a tribute "to the fine spirit of co-operation between the three components of the Army of the United States represented—the Regular Army, the National Guard, and the Organized Reserves—which prevailed throughout the course."

MIXED COMMAND NOT POPULAR AT EDGEWOOD ARSENAL.

The reconsideration by the War Department of the movement of the 6th Field Artillery to Edgewood Arsenal for station indicates that considerable opposition was raised in certain quarters to having a mixed command at this post. The movement of part of the 34th Infantry, which is en route by marching to the Maryland Chemical laboratories, will, it is held, further complicate matters.

It is pointed out that it will not make for efficiency which the Army is striving for, if a mixed command should be in operation.

The War Department has reopened the question as to where the 6th Field Artillery will be stationed, and it is expected that a decision will be made in this matter in a few days.

In describing the excellent work of the instructors at the school Captain Wall mentions Major John P. Fletcher, "a mechanical genius as well as a physician," who has charge of equipment and transportation; Capt. Herbert W. Taylor, in charge of the Department of Military Art; Major Joseph E. Bastion, in charge of Enlisted Training; Capt. J. H. Blackwell, T. G. Toussay and L. K. Patterson; Major M. C. Stayer, in charge of the Department of Hygiene and Sanitation.

He also mentions the valuable course of lectures delivered by Col. E. L. Munson, Col. A. N. Stark and Brig. Gen. W. D. McCaw, and Major J. F. Bresnahan.

Captain Wall, who is one of the leading physicians and surgeons of Eastern Arkansas, and served in the Medical Department of the Army during the World War, also paid a tribute "to the fine spirit of co-operation between the three components of the Army of the United States represented—the Regular Army, the National Guard, and the Organized Reserves—which prevailed throughout the course."

MIXED COMMAND NOT POPULAR AT EDGEWOOD ARSENAL.

The reconsideration by the War Department of the movement of the 6th Field Artillery to Edgewood Arsenal for station indicates that considerable opposition was raised in certain quarters to having a mixed command at this post. The movement of part of the 34th Infantry, which is en route by marching to the Maryland Chemical Laboratories, will, it is held, further complicate matters.

It is pointed out that it will not make for efficiency which the Army is striving for, if a mixed command should be in operation.

The War Department has reopened the question as to where the 6th Field Artillery will be stationed, and it is expected that a decision will be made in this matter in a few days.

A Brief for the General Staff

By General Buat, Chief of Staff, French Army

IN current life, we are accustomed to say that a man is complete if he possesses a brain well organized and enriched by long experience, an equalized nervous system, and healthy limbs, kept in force and suppleness by a judicious training in physical exercises.

A good army offers great analogies with the perfect man. His brain is his chief; his staff represents his nervous system; the combat units are held by his limbs. And naturally, that which is true for the army taken altogether, is equally true for the formation of lesser importance: the army corps, division, regiment. In proportion, as one descends in the hierarchy, the liberty of conception of the chief is limited more and more by the decisions that the superior authorities have already made. It is, moreover, why no one denies that it might be less difficult to command a division than an army corps, an army corps than an army, etc. This point made, that which follows can be applied to any war formation, from a regiment to a group of all the armies operating in one theater of war.

One can discuss at length on the relative importance of the three factors of strength of which I have just spoken: commander-in-chief, staff, troops. Every one knows the famous aphorism credited to Napoleon, "In war, better to have a band of donkeys conducted by a lion than a band of lions led by a donkey!" It is possible, but between the lion and the don-

GENERAL BUAT, the French Chief of Staff, well known for his brilliant writings extending over a long period of years, wrote, when sending this article, "You will agree that the lessons furnished by events from 1914 to 1918 are very numerous. It is necessary for me to make a choice. Two seem to me of capital importance: the units, or, if you prefer, the personnel; and materiel, or the mechanical side of war."

key, there is nevertheless a distance where each can find a place without too much pride or too much modesty. It is rare, in fact, that a commander-in-chief might be all of one or all of another, genial always or never under any circumstances. Often he commits mistakes, but more often these mistakes are not irreparable. Also, history offers many examples of troops who, by their valor or their cleverness in fighting, have repaired the errors of their commander-in-chief, but she teaches us equally that troops which were not very valiant nor very clever have carried the victory, anyway, thanks to the personal talent of their chief. The last war has well shown that in all the armies implicated the soldier has never failed his chief, while the chiefs have sometimes failed the soldier. The formation of the leaders is one of the greatest necessities which was made evident in the last campaign.

And, among these leaders, I place in a very good position the staff officers. In the immense assemblings of men and materiel that constitute the armies of a great nation the chief of staff would be powerless to order all and prepare for everything if he were not immediately assisted by aids of ingenious and fertile mind; that is to say, by a good staff. There are the written orders by the staff, under the inspiration of the chief of staff, which regulate, well or badly, the operations which are to reach the troops—at the right moment or too late—the arms, the food, the munitions, articles of equipment, the supplies of all kinds, without which the units could neither live nor fight.

In summing up, it is the functioning, regular or irregular, of the staff that is important for the soldier's morale, to be well or badly commanded. Nothing will serve a chief of staff to be transcendent if he is badly served by his staff. These truths have not always been appreciated during the war, as they merited to be. I wish to say that when everything functions as they wish, when the troops have their needs of all kinds properly satisfied, never does any one willingly admit that any of this is due to the staff. In revenge, if collisions between the columns take place, if the convoys encumber the roads a little, if munitions fail to arrive, if some provision tending to augment the well-being of the troops or to facilitate their operations has been neglected or even has not been done sufficiently in advance, everyone lays the blame immediately on the staff and renders it responsible.

Upon the whole, it is a way—peculiar and not agreeable, it is true—to recognize the importance of some one to charge all the sins of Israel to! That which we should retain is that those who have been charged to prepare for war the armies of their country will never give too much attention to the theoretical instruction of the officers of their staff.

This is the first of two articles, dealing with experiences in the war, by General Buat. The second article, that on materiel, will appear in the next edition of the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL.—THE EDITOR.

Army Appropriation Bill Reported to Senate

With the Pershing or Department bill attached, appropriations for 133,000 enlisted men, an authorization of 140,000 men, and substantial increases for the National Guard, Reserve officers and Citizens' Military Training Camps, the Army Appropriation bill was reported to the Senate on May 31. The Senate added a net of $45,985,120 to the bill, bringing the total appropriations for the Army carried by the bill up to $333,382,851.67. The only reductions that were made in the Senate were for Ordnance and a number of items pertaining to materiel. The Pershing bill (S. 3116) was printed in full in this paper Feb. 11.

The appropriations for Quartermaster supplies and equipment for Reserve Officers' Training Camps were increased from $2,750,000 to $3,600,000. Under the head of Citizens' Military Training Camps, the following amendment was inserted in fixing the amount appropriated for this purpose:

Travel allowances at five cents per mile as prescribed in Section 47d for such expenditures as are authorized by said Section 47d as may be necessary for the establishment and maintenance of said camps, $1,800,000 and no other funds appropriated in this act shall be available for the purposes of this paragraph.

The Senate committee changed the age of students at the camps from thirty-five years to twenty-seven years.

"except those who received training within the fiscal year of 1923 and except the veterans of the war with Germany who may be accepted if not over thirty years of age."

Officers' Reserve Corps.

The largest increase made by the Senate was for the pay and allowances of officers of the Officers' Reserve Corps, which was advanced from $250,000 to $2,000,000. This will make possible the holding of Reserve officers' schools in the different corps areas as planned by the War Department.

The proviso under which this expenditure is to be made is as follows:

That no portion of this appropriation shall be expended for the pay of a Reserve officer on active duty for a longer period than fifteen days, except such as may be detailed for duty with the War Department General Staff under Section 8a and Section 5 (b) of the Army Reorganization act approved June 4, 1920, or who may be detailed for courses of instruction at the general or special service schools of the Army, or who may be detailed for duty as instructors at civilian military training camps appropriated for in this act, or who may be detailed for duty with tactical units of the Air Service, as provided in Section 37a of the Army Reorganization act approved June 4, 1920, or not to exceed three Reserve officers in the Judge Advocate General's Department, or except one officer of the Medical Reserve Corps: Provided further, That pay and allowances of such additional officers and nurses of the Medical Reserve Corps as are required to supplement the like officers and nurses of the Regular Army in the care of beneficiaries of the United States Veterans' Bureau treated in Army hospitals may be paid from the funds allotted to the War Department by that bureau under existing law.

National Guard.

While the Senate committee increased the appropriations for the National Guard, it inserted a sting in them by placing a limitation on the development of specialized units. It struck out the House provision and substituted the following language:

None of the funds appropriated in this act shall be available for the organization or equipment or field training of new Cavalry, motorized, tank, or air units of the National Guard presented for Federal recognition after the passage of this act.

Under the head of the Militia Bureau the appropriations for forage, bedding and animals was increased from $1,002,800 to $1,928,000. Compensation for help to care for materiel and animals increased from $750,000 to $1,910,500. Expenses for camps of instruction from $6,500,000 to $9,500,000. Travel pay for officers and non-commissioned officers of the Regular Army in connection with the National Guard increased from $200,000 to $300,000. The other items, including $11,000,000 for pay to the National Guard, for armory drills remain the same. This proviso was inserted after the National Guard item:

Provided, That twenty-five per centum of the foregoing amounts for armory, equipping, and training the National Guard shall be available interchangeably for expenditure for the purposes named; but not more than twenty-five per centum shall be added to the amount appropriated for any one of such purposes;

Warrant Officers.

The Senate committee did not increase the appropriations for warrant officers of the Regular Army as was expected, but substituted a provision covering them which will make it possible to make a slight increase of the number above 600. It reads as follows:

For pay of warrant officers, $1,951,632: Provided, That no vacancies in the grade of warrant officer, exclusive of warrant officers in the Mine Planter Service, shall be filled until the number in such grade is reduced to 600, and thereafter the number shall not be increased above 600, and to effect such reduction warrant officers, upon their own application, may be placed on the unlimited retired list after thirty years' service and may compute for retirement such double time as they may have earned while serving as enlisted men: Provided further, That nothing contained herein shall prevent the appointment of qualified band leaders for authorized bands: Provided further, That no vacancies in the grade of warrant officer of the Army Mine Planter Service shall be filled until the number in such grade is reduced to forty, and thereafter the number shall not be increased above forty.

The Army Strength Fixed.

The strength of the Regular Army for the fiscal year is fixed in the following paragraphs:

Pay of Enlisted Men.—For pay of an average number of 133,000 enlisted men of the line and staff, not including the Philippine Scouts, $60,981,795: Provided, That the total authorized number of enlisted men, not including the Philippine Scouts, shall be 140,000 and this number shall not be exceeded unless in emergency.

The appropriations for the subsistence of the Army were increased from $16,550,000 to $17,000,000. Under the head of regular supplies for the Army the appropriations are increased from $10,932,000 to $12,000,000. Incidental expenses for the Army increased from $16,000,000 to $18,000,000. Barracks and quarters appropriations increased from $2,982,638 to $4,000,000. The appropriations for the Air Service of the Army are increased from $12,431,000 to $13,000,000.

The appropriations under the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice for Quartermaster supplies and civilian instructors were decreased from $80,000 to $10,000. The appropriations for the transportation of the Army and its supplies were increased from $16,000,000 to $18,000,000.

The appropriations for the Military Academy were revised and placed in budget form, with amount increased $5,000.

The Personnel Sections.

The following is the text of the personnel sections of the bill fixing the pay and strength of the corps of officers for the Regular Army:

Pay of Officers.—For pay of officers of the line and staff, $35,390,438: Provided, That after five months from the date of approval of this act no part of the sum herein appropriated for pay of officers shall be used for the pay of more than 13,000 commissioned officers of the active list of the Regular Army: Provided further, That hereafter there shall be officers as now authorized by law except that there shall be 494 colonels, 555 lieutenant colonels, 1,850 majors, 9,700 captains, 5,735 lieutenants, including first and second lieutenants of whom not to exceed 3,515 may be first lieutenants and of whom no officer shall be promoted to the grade of first lieutenant until he shall have served at least three years in the grade of second lieutenant; 1,053 officers of the Medical Corps, 177 officers of the Dental Corps, 144 officers of the Veterinary Corps, 81 officers of the Medical Administrative Corps, 190 chaplains, and the number of officers of the Medical Department and chaplains shall be as prescribed herein notwithstanding changes that may occur in the authorized enlisted or commissioned strength of the Army: Provided further, That for five months after the date of approval of this act there shall be no promotions to grades below brigadier general of officers of the Regular Army except of officers of the Medical Department and chaplains and thereafter there shall be no promotions to any grade that would cause the numbers hereinbefore authorized for each grade to be exceeded, and vacancies now existing in any grade below brigadier general not actually filled by the acceptance of an appointment tendered prior to the date of approval of this act shall not be filled, and there shall be no appointments of officers of the Medical Department that will cause the total number thereof to exceed 1,455: Provided further, That within five months of the date of approval of this act the number of officers shall be reduced to such number in each grade and in the branches of the Medical Department and chaplains as the President may direct, not exceeding the numbers hereinbefore authorized, except that there may be retained until absorbed not to exceed 194 additional majors, 395 additional captains, 32 additional officers of the Dental Corps, 40 additional officers of the Medical Administrative Corps, and 32 additional chaplains: Provided further, That the Secretary of War shall convene a board of five general officers who, under regulations prescribed by him, shall recommend to the President such officers for retirement or discharge as may be necessary, in addition to

Navy Engineering Saves Large Sums

The following paper, issued by the Bureau of Engineering, Navy Department, ought to furnish food for thought for those persons who accuse the Navy of wasting money at times:

Engineering in the Navy is so important a function in fitting the Navy to perform its mission—its part so closely linked to all other successful naval endeavor—that it appears desirable at this particular time to advise all officers eligible to perform engineering duty of their responsibilities and opportunities.

The hard work of the officers and men afloat that is achieving self-maintenance for the Navy does not pass unnoticed, nor does it merely save money. This labor has made possible certain definite improvements in the Fleet's machinery, and will make possible further improvements so that we have reason to hope for a Fleet that is fit and ready for any service.

In October, 1921, notice was received by this bureau that the rate of expenditure of funds during the current fiscal year was in excess of the limit fixed by available naval appropriations. On May 1 an indicated deficit that six months ago was $700,000 had been wiped out and there had become available nearly one million dollars for the purchase of improved engineering materials for the Fleet. This million dollars' worth of material is being purchased without creating a deficit.

The expenditures of the Fleet for cleaning gear have doubled; at the same time expenditures for lubricating oil, fire brick and packing have decreased so much that the total expenditures for supplies afloat are now about $150,000 a month less than they were a year ago. The indirect saving from cleanliness is obvious.

Where Money Is Saved.

For every dollar's worth of material that is worked into a ship by the ship's force, or by the Fleet repair force, the charge against the "Engineering" appropriation is exactly the cost of the material; when a similar amount of material is worked into the vessel at a navy yard the average cost exceeds $3.50. Thus every time that the Fleet has accomplished self-maintenance the cost of this maintenance has been reduced to less than 30 per cent of what it would have been had it been necessary for the work to be accomplished by a navy yard. As a direct result of the success of the Fleet in accomplishing self-maintenance and in leaving unnecessary work undone, this bureau has been enabled to institute the following definite improvements to the machinery of the Fleet that would otherwise have been left undone for lack of funds:

- To purchase new distilling plant of low pressure type which will result in increased capacity and decreased cost of operation. (Fourteen ships.)
- To purchase oil purifiers for clearing fuel oil used under the boilers; this will result in more satisfactory oil burning due to less frequent plugging of atomizers, in more reliable operation due to keeping water out of the oil, and in a reduction of the amount of cleaning necessary in the fuel tanks. (Ten ships.)
- To purchase electric driven feed pumps for port use, which will increase the economy and reliability of port operation. (Sixteen ships.)
- To purchase electric driven fuel oil service pumps for port use, which will increase the economy and reliability of port operation. (Ten ships.)
- To modify on all ships all auxiliary turbine exhaust valves to prevent excessive pressures on turbine casings.
- To provide additional safeguards against fuel oil fires by supplying additional distant-controlled valves on all oil burning ships.
- To provide for installing new blower supports for all Terry turbine driven blowers on destroyers equipped with this type of blower.
- To provide feed tugs with turbine driven blowers.
- To provide retarders for all ships equipped with oil-burning Scotch boilers.
- To provide experimental dampers to eliminate vibration in the engines of S-3 to S-9.
- To provide improved mufflers for S-3 to S-9.
- To provide all submarines with fuel oil meters.
- To provide 100-watt "AC" tube set, Navy model T.M. These sets are for submarines and increase the range of communication from three to five times. (Sixty ships.)

Radio Stations Improved.

In addition to the foregoing considerable improvements to the Fleet that this Fleet itself has earned and paid for, this bureau has been able to institute improvements to shore radio stations required for communication with the Fleet amounting to $143,420.

Among these items are:

- To provide special high voltage generator for Anacostia. This is for development work to keep Navy to the forefront.

- To provide two K.W. 2,000-cycle oscillator for sound research work.

- To install radio telephone at Arlington, Va.

The intense competition in fuel economy has had a direct result upon the condition of the machinery of the Fleet due to exact operation and careful supervision. This means not only lower costs of upkeep, but greater readiness for service and is another direct dividend to the Fleet from its own work.

The future holds much opportunity for further improvement. This improvement can only be made if past performances as regards cost are bettered. At present the Fleet is doing better than it has done, but the goal of a machinery plant's entire readiness for any service is very distant. There are now in sight improvements to the machinery of vessels of the Fleet that it would cost $16,000,000 to accomplish at navy yards. Until all these improvements (repairs, alterations and additions) have been accomplished our Fleet's machinery is not entirely fit and ready for service. If they are accomplished we may expect the port fuel consumption of battleships to average below eight tons, of destroyers below 500 gallons and the Fleet radius of action to be increased 50 per cent.

Appropriations Pared Down.

The appropriations for the coming year are based upon exact necessities without allowance for improvements, but they are based also upon past performances. Improvements, therefore, in costs of supplies, repairs and operation, all of which depend upon economy and self-maintenance afloat, will make possible in the future, as they have in the past, continued progress in the development of the machinery of the Fleet.

Increase in the radius of action of the Fleet can be expected only from improvement in the skill, training and zeal of the personnel afloat. Success in this endeavor must be achieved before improved machinery can be paid for. The time will come as a result of the present laudable spirit of service when we will have our Fleet's machinery economical, reliable and ready. Every gallon of fuel saved, i.e., not wasted, will contribute towards the Fleet's spending more hours underway and hence being more thoroughly trained in maneuvers and gunnery exercises. The value of our Navy, in which nearly all operation is secured through machinery, depend, therefore, upon engineering skill, steadily and zealously applied.

The true engineer will always avoid waste and will prevent this waste, so far as practicable, with available means. It makes no difference what the form of the waste. Waste to-day in any form is not merely an offense against the taxpayer—it limits the possibilities of naval improvement.

Test for the Navy.

The present stringency of funds is a test from which the Navy must emerge a stronger, harder and worthier Service. To-day the honor of the Service is more completely in the hands of the naval engineers than in those of any other equal body of men. The lessons learned and the strength acquired through necessity will never be lost.

The officer of the Navy is a servant of the Government. He delights in this service and proudly wears its livery, the naval uniform. A distinguished naval officer of high rank, now on the retired list, recently wrote: "I have known among naval officers, we all have, many high peaks of loyalty and forgetfulness of self in the giving of energy and ability to the Service. It is an inspiration to live with fine characters of that sort. They simply go ahead doing their duty without thought of reward or of possible effects of overwork. The idea of devotion to duty as the measure of worth, of worth as the measure of happiness, and of service as the proper aim of each of us, I believe to be true, absolutely. Particularly do I believe that lasting happiness is found only through the medium of unselfish service. The thought of self in service, no matter how big the service, runs counter to nature's laws of compensation. Self-glorification and contentment of spirit are not found on the same trail."

J. K. ROBINSON,
Engineer-in-Chief, U.S. Navy,
Chief of Bureau.

Endorsement.

Approved.
The Secretary of the Navy takes this occasion to congratulate the Service on the close co-operation and application to technical efficiency which, as set forth in the attached paper, has directly resulted in making available nearly one million dollars for the purchase of improved engineering material.

It is extremely gratifying to note that the indomitable "will to win" is paramount in the heart of the American naval officer and man, and that obstacles offer but an added incentive for harder work and greater gain.

It is to be hoped that this proof of the dependence of naval readiness for service upon efficient and economical engineering practices in the Fleet will inspire the personnel of the Navy to maintain the present high standards and to improve them wherever possible.

EDWIN DENBY.

CHIEF OF AIR SERVICE, U.S.A., ON EXTENSIVE INSPECTION TRIP.

Major Gen. Mason M. Patrick, Chief of Air Service, accompanied by Major H. A. Dargue, A.S., is making a trip of inspection of the activities of the Air Service. He is making the trip largely by airplane in such a manner as to give him an intimate knowledge of the work in the field. General Patrick and Major Dargue left Washington May 19 to inspect the fields in the 4th Corps Area, proceeding by train to Miami, Fla., where they inspected Chapman Field. While there they were the guests of the Chamber of Commerce and were shown about Miami and Miami Beach.

On Sunday, General Patrick, piloted by Major Dargue, made a 175-mile trip across the Everglades by the way of Lake Ochochie to Carlstrom Field in a JN-6 training plane. After going over Carlstrom and Dorr Fields they left Carlstrom Field in a training plane and flew to Jacksonville, Fla., approximately 250 miles, in four hours. They landed in Sanford, Fla., for gas and oil and proceeded by the way of Daytona and St. Augustine.

At Jacksonville they were met by two DH-4s, which had been sent down from Montgomery. On May 24 they flew to Americus, Ga., 210 miles, in two hours. After inspecting Americus, both depot and field, they flew over to Camp Benning, Ga., a distance of fifty miles, attending the barbecue incident to the graduation of the class from the Infantry School.

They left Fort Benning shortly after lunch and flew to Montgomery, Ala., requiring about an hour and ten minutes, going through several rainstorms on the way. On May 25 they left Montgomery at seven o'clock and made a non-stop trip to Camp Bragg, N.C., being six hours and twenty-five minutes in the air, covering a distance of 525 miles. After inspecting the Air Service activities at Camp Bragg they completed the trip to Washington in a little less than three hours, a distance of 280 miles.

The flying time on the trip up to this point was approximately twenty hours. By utilizing airplanes on the trip the Chief of Air Service was able to save several days. General Patrick left Washington on May 29 by train for Chicago. At Chicago he took an airplane for Milwaukee. After attending the balloon race at Milwaukee he further inspected the Air Service activities in the Middle West.

NATIONAL CONVENTION OF WARRANT OFFICERS' ASSOCIATION.

The second national convention of the Warrant Officers' Association, U.S. Army, was held at the Gunter Hotel, San Antonio, Texas, on May 9-10-11. Seventy-five warrant officers were in attendance, and the convention was highly successful.

Addresses were made by Major Gen. John L. Hines, commanding the 8th Corps Area; Brig. Gen. Edward M. Lewis, commanding the 2d Division; Brig. Gen. William R. Smith, Col. B. B. Buck and Col. Selah R. H. Tompkins.

Several important changes in the constitution of the association were adopted, and other matters of interest to warrant officers were acted upon. The headquarters of the association will be retained in Atlanta, Ga., for the present, although steps will be taken to establish headquarters in Washington in the near future.

The following officers were elected: President, E. I. Sharp; vice president, M. Surrus; directors, Hugo May, William H. Gage, John H. Worford, W. C. Welch; trustees, Arcemus Carter, Harold E. Hill, Oliver H. Balch, Albert Feiss, John Vernon, R. J. Meskill, D. W. Thickston, J. H. Wetherholt, J. J. Gannon, Thomas J. Berney, James Devine, John C. Branth, O. B. Ellison, W. M. Phelps and Henry C. Wathen.

The schedule of entertainment provided for the visitors by 8th Corps Area Council No. 4, included airplane flights and other interesting features which kept the delegates busy during the spare time of their three-day stay in San Antonio.

1ST DIVISION OFFICERS ENTERTAIN AT BENNING.

The officers and former officers of the 1st Division, A.E.F., of whom there are more than fifty at the Infantry School, Fort Benning, Ga., entertained some two hundred guests on May 18.

On arriving each guest was presented with a shoulder patch of paper—the Red one—containing an extract from the G.H. Q. citation of the 1st Division.

The entertainment commenced with a supper at the Officers' Club mess, which was followed by the showing at the Camp Theater of a special set of films—those showing the 1st Division in France, followed by the films of the Marshal Foch trip throughout the United States.

Col. Frank Parker, Inf., late regimental, brigade and division commander of the 1st. Major and Mrs. J. D. Patch and Major and Mrs. W. J. Tack received.

During the hop which closed the entertainment music was furnished by Major W. A. Gano, who sang "La Madoles"; Capt. F. J. Heraty, who gave two violin solos, and the 24th Infantry Detachment Quartette.

Submarine S-51 Completes Its Test

The official report to the Navy Department of the successful completion on Long Island Sound of a 52-hour continuous running test of the submarine S-51 adds a second modern submersible of this type to the American submarine flotilla. It is one of four of this class under construction for the Navy by the Lake Torpedo Co., of Bridgeport, Conn., all of which will soon be commissioned in active service. The S-51 is 248 feet long.

The S-51 is a double hull Navy designed boat with many new features that are not found in the other S-class boats. The plan on which she was built contains the most meritorious and effective features of German U-boat construction. One of the most notable new features is the method of opening valves to submerging tanks which makes possible quick dives by the boat. During the trials it was found possible to drop it under water in less than a minute.

Submarines of this type are equipped with four 21-inch torpedo tubes in the bow and one in the aft. They carry a four-inch gun in "wet mount" on the forward deck and afford greater comfort to the crew than previous types. The arrangement of the submerging valves controls lead to a central pneumatic manifold, where the turn of a single lever opens all Kingston valves simultaneously, permitting between 300 and 400 tons of water to flow into the diving tanks in less than 60 seconds.

During the builder's trials of one of these boats the ship was driven at full speed of fifteen knots towards the observing tug until a whistle blast signalled for a crash dive. The submarine was foaming through the water with both of her thousand horsepower oil engines drawing at full power and was riding high in the water. She was steering to pass close along side of the tug.

When the signal was given for the dive the white vapor of the exhaust blast pouring out of either side astern the submarine ceased abruptly. She was switched to her electric motors for submergence and still came on at unchecked speed about three times her length astern the tug. But those on the tug could see that she was sinking swiftly into the water. The big craft was clear under except for her conning tower as she reached the tug's stern. At that point her driving rudders swung her nose down and in another fifty feet only the slim, rod-like length of the main periscope appeared on the surface.

When the periscope reached a point opposite the pilot house the commander of the submarine ordered rudders up and the big craft "porpoised" to the surface to show a brief glimpse of her superstructure, deck and finally her tilted stern, then vanished completely from sight in an eight degree "crash" that carried her at full speed to a depth of ninety feet, where she flattened out like a gliding airplane and swung off on a long curve. The whole operation had taken less than sixty seconds and the boat was so perfectly handled and responded so perfectly to her controls that she passed the tug less than her own width. Fifteen minutes later she slid into sight again a half mile away and lay waiting for her observers.

MEMORIAL DAY OBSERVED WITH MILITARY CEREMONY.

Memorial Day exercises in honor of American dead of the Civil, Spanish-American and World Wars were appropriately observed throughout the United States and its insular possessions on May 30 on land and sea. Tribute to the dead was paid by military parades, unveiling of monuments, decoration of graves and memorial exercises.

On foreign soil where American dead, who gave up their lives in the World War, are buried their memory was honored, and French and British joined Americans in honoring the day abroad. Exercises were held in Paris and London, and at Brookwood Cemetery, England.

At Portsmouth, England, the U.S.S. Utah landed bluejackets and marines to decorate the grave of a shipmate buried there, and all British warships in the harbor had their colors at half mast in honor of the exercises.

The graves of American soldiers were decorated at Warsaw, Poland; Copenhagen, Denmark, and appropriate exercises were held by the A.E. in Germany at Coblenz and by our forces in China.

Among the interesting exercises in New York city was the unveiling of a statue at Broadway and 167th street in memory of men from Washington Heights and Inwood who gave up their lives in the World War. The monument was designed by Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, who had the honor of unveiling it.

The unveiling was preceded by a parade, which was reviewed by Major Gen. R. L. Bullard, U.S.A., made up of detachments of the 22d Infantry, U.S.A., from Governors Island, bluejackets and marines from the Navy, 102d Engineers, N.Y.N.G., Old Guard, Veterans of Foreign War, American Legion and Defendand Association, comprising veterans of the 22d and 102d Engineers, N.Y.N.G.

Class B Law Sustained By the Supreme Court

The policy of the War Department in administering the classification (Class B) law under the provisions of Section 24b, of the Army Reorganization act, was sustained by the Supreme Court of the United States in two decisions rendered May 29. The decision was rendered in the cases of Col. John W. French and Col. William F. Greary, who appealed from the decision of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

The principal point at issue was whether Class B cases should be approved and personally reviewed by the President, as in the cases of trial by court-martial. The Supreme Court took the position that they do not and that the Secretary of War, upon order from the President, could take action.

Opinion of the Court.

The court, after reviewing the proceedings in classification of officers and setting forth the purposes of the law, said:

"While there are allegations in the petition that various formalities in the procedure prescribed by Section 24b were not complied with, the relator does not place upon any of these in the assignments of error in this court and in argument the relator presses only one question upon our attention for decision, viz: 'It is contended that Section 24b imposes a personal, non-delegable, judicial duty upon the President, to review the record of the Board of Final Classification in each case after it has made a finding, and by his order, to approve or disapprove it, and that because the approval in this case was not made by the President personally but by the Secretary of War, acting under delegated general direction and authority from the President, it is void and must be so treated.'

"The construction of the section thus contended for, obviously, would place such a burdensome, if not impossible, personal duty upon the President during the process of reducing the Army from a war to a peace basis that if Congress had intended to attempt such a thing, we may be sure its purpose would have been clearly expressed, and not left to doubtful implication.

"The argument for the relator is bottomed entirely upon the use of the words 'except upon the order of the President,' for there is nothing else in the section suggesting participation by the President after the convening of the Preliminary Classification Board, and we are thus brought to consider the construction which should be placed upon these seven words.

Other Cases Cited.

"To give the effect claimed for the words by the relator would result in denying any meaning whatever to the clear and emphatic declaration immediately preceding them that 'the finding of said Classification Board shall be final and not subject to further revision' for it would render such finding ineffective in every case until approved by the President, and then, of course, its effect and finality would be derived from the President's approval and not from the finding of the board which would be rendered, at most, merely advisory. Familiar principles (United States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 460; Peck v. Jones, 7 How. 612; Montclair v. Ramsdell, 107 U.S. 117) forbid the acceptance of such a construction save under the compulsion of a clear expression of Congressional purpose, such as is not to be found in either the section or the act we are considering.

"But both the meaning and purpose of the entire expression seem very clear. The declaration that the finding of the Final Classification Board shall be final and not subject to further revision 'could not be more emphatically worded, while the exception 'upon the order of the President' is in such general terms that it plainly contemplates only discretionary action on his part to be taken, on the suggestion of the Secretary of War in special cases, on the application of officers involved or their friends, or on his own 'mere motion.' The exception plainly enough was inserted, not for the purpose of imposing a very great burden upon the President, but rather as a Congressional recognition of the right in him as the Chief Executive and Commander-in-Chief of the Army (a right which he probably would have had without it), to interfere in such cases at his option, leaving the finding of the board to become final should he elect not to take any action, and perhaps, also, for the purpose of forestalling the claim of its being successfully argued that the final finding—'not subject to further revision'—given to the finding of the board, was intended to place such finding beyond the power of interposition in any case by the President. This construction gives consistent effect to each clause of the provision and that contended for by the relator must be denied.

"In support of his contention, which has thus been rejected, the relator relies upon Bankie v. United States, 123 U.S. 549; United States v. Page, 137 U.S. 673; and United States v. Fletcher, 148 U.S. 84. All of these were court-martial cases, conducted under authority of the then 65th Article of War (2 Stat. 367, chap. 29) which prescribed that the sentence of such a court in cases such as were there under consideration should not be carried into execution 'until after the proceedings shall have been transmitted to the Secretary of War, to be laid before the President of the United States for his confirmation or disapproval and orders in the case.' It was held, obviously enough, that the quoted language called for personal review and action by the President and that making him, as it did, in effect, a member of the court, the required review was judicial in character and therefore non-delegable. The difference between words of statute and the ones we have here renders these decisions too plainly inapplicable for discussion.

Board's Action Final.

"Under the construction of Section 24b thus arrived at neither personal nor delegated approval by the President of the finding by the Final Board of Classification was necessary before action by the honest and faithful board, and, if no action whatever had been taken by him through the agency of the Secretary of War that finding, by force of the express words of the statute, would have been 'final and not subject to further review," and thereupon the case would have been ripe for the further action prescribed by the statute.

"Since the section did not require personal action by the President, the action on his behalf and by his authority taken by the Secretary of War was in a legally sufficient form. (R.S. 216; Willcox v. Jackson, 18 Pet. 498, 513; Williams v. United States, 1 How. 290, 297; Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company of Idaho v. United States, 244 U.S. 51, 557).

"But the Court of Appeals held that the action of the Secretary of War, which is assailed in the case, was taken in the exercise of duly delegated administrative power of the President and was really executive action by him which the courts may not control by mandamus or otherwise and that, therefore, the judgment of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia was without jurisdiction and void.

"As a colonel in the Army, the relator was subject to military law and the principles of that law, as provided by Congress, constituted for him due process of law in a constitutional sense. Reaves v. Ainsworth, 219 U.S. 296, 304.

Boards and Courts Lawful.

"By the demurrer it is admitted that the three boards and the court of inquiry, provided for by Section 24b, were lawfully convened and constituted. They obviously had jurisdiction over the relator and over the subject-matter involved and there is no contention that any of them exceeded the scope of its lawful powers. The only infirmity claimed to exist in the entire proceeding is, that the review and approval of the findings of the Final Classification Board and the ultimate order retiring relator from the Army, were made by the Secretary of War, 'acting in the name of and by the authority of the President,' instead of by the President personally. But we have found this contention unsound and that the action of the President by the Secretary was legally sufficient compliance with the act of Congress.

"Thus we have lawfully constituted military tribunals, with jurisdiction over the person and subject-matter involved unquestioned and unquestionable, and action by them within the scope of the power with which they are invested by law. It is settled beyond controversy that under such conditions decisions by military tribunals, constituted by act of Congress, cannot be reviewed or set aside by civil courts in a mandamus proceeding or otherwise. Johnson v. Sayre, 158 U.S. 109, 118; Carter v. McQuay, 158 U.S. 365, 380, 381; Mullan v. United States, 212 U.S. 516, 520; Collins v. McDonald, decided April 10, 1922.

"If it were otherwise, the civil courts would virtually administer the rules and articles of war, irrespective of those to whom that duty and obligation has been confided by the laws of the United States, from whose decisions no appeal or jurisdiction of any kind has been given to the civil magistrate or civil courts. Dynes v. Hoover, 20 How. 65, 82.

"It results that, because the action of the President, given effect by the order of the Secretary of War, was in full compliance with the act of Congress, and also because the Supreme Court did not have jurisdiction to order the writ of mandamus prayed for, the judgment of the Court of Appeals reversing the judgment of that court must be affirmed."

RELATIVE RANK IN ARMY AND NAVY BEING CONSIDERED BY PRESIDENT.

The question of the relative rank of Army and Navy officers is now before President Harding in a perplexing manner. It has been carried there by the Governor of Hawaii, who wants to know whether Major Gen. Charles P. Summerall, U.S. A., outranks Rear Admiral Edward Simpson, U.S.N., commandant of the 14th Naval District. It is not understood that either Admiral Simpson or General Summerall are concerned over the matter, but the Governor is placed in an embarrassing predicament in dealing with the military and naval authorities. In certain matters, it is stated, the Governor does not know whether to recognize General Summerall or Admiral Simpson as the superior authority.

In war time the military authorities are often recognized by civilians as taking precedence over the Navy where they are operating in the same zone. It so happens that Admiral Simpson's commission is six months older than that of General Summerall's. On this account, it is stated, the Navy Department is insisting that Admiral Simpson outranks General Summerall. Although the War Department is presided over by a graduate from Annapolis, a contrary view is taken, it is said, by Secretary Weeks and other authorities in the War Department.

The President, it is stated, has asked the Secretary of War and the Acting Secretary of the Navy to submit briefs on the subject, and he will exercise his authority as Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy in making a decision.

SCABBARO AND BLADE ELECTS

BRIG. GEN. GEORGE V. H. MOSELEY.

Brig. Gen. George V. H. Moseley, U.S. A., has accepted his election to associate membership in the Northwestern Chapter of Scabbaro and Blade, the national honorary military fraternity, according to the Northwestern Daily, Evanston, Ill. Scabbaro and Blade was founded in 1904 and has become active in thirty-six universities and colleges throughout the United States. It is one of the most exclusive honorary organizations in the country. Initiatory ceremonies will be held at Evanston, Ill., the birthplace of General Moseley, or at Camp Custer, Mich., where he is organizing the summer training camps for the Reserve Officers' Training Corps Organized Reserves, National Guard and Citizens' Military Training Camps.

GENERAL MULLALLY BOOSTING ASSOCIATION OF ARMY OF U.S.

Brig. Gen. Thornwell Mullally, O.R.C., of San Francisco, who has been in the East for the past week, is creating considerable enthusiasm for the Association of the Army of the United States. It is insisted by General Mullally that the members of the association on the Pacific coast are in no way attempting to extend their organization to cover the East, but rather that they are of the attitude of being willing to unite with any organization of this character in other sections of the country. The only principle which they have really adopted, General Mullally explained, is that there should be a national organization composed of members of the Regular Army, the National Guard and the Reserves.

"We on the Pacific coast," said General Mullally, "have adopted a tentative constitution which is more in the character of a declaration of principle than the details of a plan for an organization. Our idea is that there should be a national organization which will support the military authorities in the administration and in carrying out the provisions of the National Defense act. This provides for the Army of the United States with three components. The law places a great burden upon the National Guard and the Reserves in carrying out this policy. What is done to carry out the policy outside of the Regular Army must be entirely of a volunteer character and we cannot work effectively unless we organize. We must have the Regular Army in the organization as professional advisers and instructors.

"Our plan is to organize in zones corresponding to the corps areas. The local organizations in the zones are called sectors. On the Pacific coast it is not a social organization, but an organization for the purpose of getting practical ideas on military affairs so as to assist us in qualifying for service in the National Guard and in the Reserves. I believe that each zone and sector should be left free to work out the problems as local conditions demand. There is only one thing that we must have, and that is co-operation among the components of the Army of the United States in working out the military problems of the country. This, in my mind, will be real preparedness."

The New York city section of the Association of the Army of the United States was organized at a meeting held June 1 at the Downtown Association, 60 Pine street. General Mullally was present and outlined the objects of the association to the new members.

ARMY ASSOCIATION SECTOR FORMED IN ATLANTA, GA.

The Atlanta sector of the Army Association of the United States was organized with more than 125 officers and ex-officers of the Regular Army, National Guard and the Officers' Reserve Corps as charter members at a meeting on May 25. Major Franklin S. Chalmers, O.R.C., was elected president; Col. William R. Dashiell, Inf., U.S.A., first vice president; Capt. Robert G. Stephens, O.R.C., second vice president; Capt. Eugene Oberdorfer, jr., N.G., third vice president; Capt. E. E. Wilson, O.R.C., secretary; Major Bonville McWhorter, O.R.C., treasurer, and Major Robert B. Troutman, N.G., judge advocate.

Colonel Dashiell acted as temporary chairman until the election of permanent officers of the association. Officers and ex-officers of the three branches of the Service who attended the meeting were enthusiastic in their praise of the aims of the association and pledged their full co-operation to make the Atlanta sector one of the best in the country. The sector starts off with a charter membership of 101.

SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE ACTIVE IN SUPPORT OF ARMY.

The San Francisco Chronicle, of which Arthur Clark is managing editor, is devoting considerable space to the Army. The Chronicle comes out frequently with a full page of Army matter. It is one of the most influential papers in the West and its support of the Army is reflected in the public support the armed forces receive on the Pacific coast.

An article written by Lieut. Col. Kenyon A. Joyce, General Staff, 9th Corps Area, on preparedness, in which Colonel Joyce took occasion to boost the Association of the Army of the United States, was published by the Chronicle and sent by Mr. Clark to forty-eight other newspapers throughout the country to be released at the same time.

GERMAN WARSHIPS COLLIDE, AND TEN LIVES ARE LOST.

The German battleship Hannover, a vessel of 13,200 tons completed in 1907, was in collision with the torpedo boat T-18 on May 24, while engaged in maneuvers near Sassenitz.

Ten sailors of the torpedo boat lost their lives in the collision.

Experiments with the French Uniform

By Capt. Raugel, Gen. Staff, French Army
(European Military Correspondent.)

It was known in France, prior to 1914, that the color of the French uniform was too visible and should be replaced by a color less easily seen. Other nations had already changed theirs. The British army had adopted a khaki in the middle of the war of the Transvaal. Japan had had to replace her black uniforms by a yellow khaki during the Manchurian campaign, this color being very slightly visible in the country where her armies were operating. Germany finally came to giving her army a gray uniform perfectly adapted to the colors of the country of western Europe.

In 1912-1913 numerous trials were held in France with gray, blue and other colors, but the ordinary civilian did not believe that war would come, and considered it a burdensome expense to propose a change in the color of the uniform. Finally, the war did come. Then there was no time to make any change and the army had to go into action in 1914 with the infantry in red trousers and the artillery in black.

The first combat showed to what extent the German uniform was invisible and what relative invulnerability was assured the German soldier as a consequence. Our losses at the beginning of the campaign made us cruelly regret the economy which had prevented our being able to effect a change in the color of the uniform.

However, the stock of uniforms was rapidly used up, with the result that cloth of some color had to be made. Horizon blue was adopted.

This color was much less brilliant than those of former uniforms. When a little bit dirty it assured the French soldier at sunset as well as at dawn almost an absolute invisibility. On the contrary, however, in the middle of the day it was much more visible than the khaki or gray.

The war over, the Commission on Uniforms of the Ministry of War, after numerous studies, proposed various changes, not only in color, but also in cut. The Superior Council of War, when it was consulted, declared in favor of khaki for the bulk of the army. So the Minister of War decided that khaki would be the color for the uniform.

This decision was received with satisfaction by the officers independently of the question of invisibility, as the war had made them quite willing to have a uniform of a color which did not soil as easily as horizon blue.

Their happiness, however, was short. The Minister of War went on to say that the stock of horizon blue cloth for the troops would not be used up before 1932, and blue would remain during this time, the color of the uniform of the metropolitan army (the home army, which is maintained by universal military service in contradistinction to the colonial army, which is maintained by voluntary service). This decision was to apply both to officers and men.

At the same time a new officers' uniform was adopted, a tunic with long skirts, massive epaulettes, wide sword belt, sword, and congress gaiter-boots. These regulations were received with protest by the officers, who have been given no reason for their adoption. They had found the simple uniform with the shoulder belt they had worn during the war sufficiently trim for official ceremonies.

On receiving the protest the Minister of War concluded that those most interested in the question of a change in uniform were those who would have to wear it and bear the expense of obtaining it, so he asked the commanding officers of the various units their advice. Unfortunately, this advice can only concern the cut and the accessories, such as sword belts, epaulettes, and so forth. The color must remain blue until the present stocks of cloth are used up.

A satisfactory solution of the question cannot be seen, except some distance off.

RETIRED OFFICERS PLAN TO FORM ORGANIZATION.

As the result of the agitation growing out of the rate of retired pay under the Service pay legislation, plans for the organization of an Association of Army and Navy Retired Officers are being discussed at Washington. The matter was taken up informally at the Army and Navy Club and there probably will be a meeting in the near future at which formal action will be taken.

It is recognized that there is an unfriendly element in Congress which is constantly attacking the retired officers' list. The amount of money that the Government is expending for this purpose has been greatly magnified until there is a popular idea that the retired list is one of the great burdens of the Government.

The need of a campaign of education on this subject is felt among the retired officers and it is being urged that the retired officers of both the Services should unite with this end in view.

Conferees Agree On the Pay Bill

By E. B. Johns

[Washington Correspondent.]

As finally agreed to in the conference committee of Senate and House, the pay bill for the Services contains one provision which upon mature consideration will be eventually admitted by Congress to be a deplorable injustice. This is the substitute of what was made of the Oliver amendment adopted on the floor of the House which kept the pay of retired officers in the grades of colonel, lieutenant colonel and major on the 1908 basis. The amendment as finally agreed to in the conference provides that:

"nothing contained in the first sentence of Section 17, or any other section of this act, shall authorize an increase in the pay of officers or warrant officers on the retired list on June 30, 1922."

Two Rates of Retired Pay.

It will be observed that the amendment as finally agreed to not only keeps the retired officers of the field grades but warrant officers on the 1908 pay schedule. This will make two rates of pay for retired officers after the bill is signed by the President. An officer retired on July 1 will draw a higher rate of pay than one that was on the retired list on June 30. When this condition has become known throughout the country Congressmen will hear from their constituents and eventually the law will be amended to put all retired officers, without regard to date of retirement, upon the same pay basis.

A heroic effort was made by representatives of the Services to impress upon the members of the House this inconsistency in the bill, but no progress was made in this direction. The leaders on both sides of the House were firmly set against the Senate amendment striking out the Oliver proposition. They refused absolutely to yield on this point. It is stated that they had canvassed the House and were confident that they could defeat the Senate amendment, which would have thrown the bill back into conference again. As the House is preparing to recess, there was real danger of a deadlock on the pay bill which might have thrown it over until after the existing law expired and have resulted in a number of dangerous complications.

Even when Senator Wadsworth made a report from the conference on May 31 there was not a protest in the Senate against the receding of the Senate conferees on this amendment. Chairman Wadsworth stated that the amendment would further reduce by $500,000 the expenses of maintaining the Services. By the few remarks that were made the impression appeared to prevail that adoption of the original Senate amendment, which put all retired officers on the new pay basis, was retroactive.

No one explained to the Senate that retired officer's pay is based on a certain percentage of active pay, and that when the rate of pay of active officers is changed the retired pay should automatically go up or down. With this indifferent attitude of the Senate it becomes apparent that the unfriendly attitude of the House leaders, both on the Democratic and Republican side, towards retired officers had been sustained. It is now only a matter of detail before the conference report will be adopted and the bill signed by the President.

National Guard Service for Longevity.

The only other important amendment adopted by the conferees was that covering the credit given for National Guard service to Regular Army officers. This is covered by the following, which is inserted on line 15 after the word pay,

"and service as a contract surgeon serving full time and also 75 per centum of all other periods of time they have held commissions as officers of the Organized Militia between Jan. 21, 1903, and July 1, 1916, or of the National Guard, the Naval Militia or the National Naval Volunteers since June 3, 1916."

This, it will be observed, is a compromise which increases the amount of credit given from 50 to 75 per cent, and restricts the period to commissioned service under the Dick act and the National Defense act.

Medical Administrative Corps.

The Senate amendment to the House bill relative to fixing the pay for the fourth period, which reads, "except those whose promotion is limited by law to this grade" was stricken out. For this amendment the following language was substituted:

"except those whose promotion is limited by law to this grade and who are not entitled under existing law to the pay and allowances of higher grade."

The House receded on the amendment which increased the allowances for nurses from the first to the second period and the rental for quarters from the first to the second. Aside from this, the amendments inserted in the bill in conference consisted largely of the changes in the numbers of the sections and the correction of the language.

JUSTICE TO THE RETIRED

PHILIPPINE SCOUT OFFICERS.

The amendment to the Service pay bill inserted in the Senate and agreed to in the conference relative to retired Philippine Scout officers will affect about eighty-nine officers, including sixty-five former captains, eighteen former first lieutenants and six former second lieutenants. Under the amendment, most of the officers will be promoted on the retired list.

It is stated that the members of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, when they reported out the Army Reorganization act, assumed that they had taken care of this class of retired Scout officers. It developed later that the provisions of the Army Reorganization act did not place them on the same basis as retired officers of the Regular Army as the members of the committee had assumed. Most of these officers served in the Philippine Insurrection and had distinguished service. They were composed of volunteer officers and former sergeants of the Regular Army, who went into the Philippine Scouts during the early days of its organization and development.

The adoption of the amendment was due almost entirely to the able presentation of the case by Capt. Bruer Carter, who served with the Philippine Scouts. He was given a special hearing by the Senate committee when the pay bill was up for consideration.

ARMY NOTES.

The Infantry Board is now making practical tests of the Thompson sub-machine gun, and it is expected that the tests will be completed about the middle of June. The Chief of Ordnance will soon send to the Infantry Board a few shoulder rifles made on the same principle as the Thompson sub-machine gun.

Sergt. Henry Smith, Corp. Russell Dustin and Bugler Joseph Perchalski, all of the 22d Infantry, U.S.A., Fort Niagara, N.Y., convicted of murdering E. Watson Stimers, a laundry wagon driver, last fall, were sentenced May 24 to indeterminate sentences of not less than twenty years or more than life in Auburn Prison, according to a newspaper dispatch from Lockport, N.Y.

The office of the Quartermaster General is preparing plans for quarters to be erected at Fort Benning. It is proposed at this time that the buildings will be constructed on the four-family apartment plan, but nothing of a definite nature has been arrived at.

RECORD TRYOUT, INFANTRY TEAM, FORT BENNING;

FOURTH AND LAST DAY OF COMPETITION.

Final tryouts at the Infantry School, Fort Benning, for the selection of the squad to go to Fort Niagara, where the rifle team candidates are to be given a month's practice shooting resulted in the names of the thirty-four high shooters being forwarded to Washington with the request that they be ordered to Niagara.

The match at Fort Benning lasted four days, four ranges being shot, 200 and 600 slow fire, 200 and 300 rapid fire. The possible aggregate was 1800. The following is the list of those recommended for the trip:

Provided further, That any officer whose actual length of service as hereinbefore defined is greater than the service with which he would be credited under the foregoing proviso shall be credited with his actual length of service: Provided further, That so much of Sec. 24 of the act approved June 4, 1920, as provides that any person originally appointed under the provisions of said act at an age greater than 45 years shall, when retired, receive retired pay at the rate of four per centum of active pay for each year of commissioned service shall not be construed as applicable to said officers when retired under the provisions of this act or when retired for physical disability incident to the service:

Provided further, That officers shall be assigned to the several branches of the Army so that the number assigned to any branch, except of the Medical Department and chaplains, shall be 82.4 per centum of the number prescribed for such branch by the act of June 4, 1920, but the President may increase or diminish the number of officers assigned to any branch by not more than a total of 30 per centum.

Chairman Wadsworth on June 1 discussed with leaders of the Senate the time at which the Army bill should be taken up and passed. He urged immediate consideration, but Senator McCumber, who has charge of the time as chairman of the Finance Committee, expressed himself in favor of laying it over until the latter part of next week. Senator Wadsworth declared that to carry out the legislative program it should be passed this week. There are indications that it will come up on Monday, or even at an earlier date.

POLITICS RESPONSIBLE FOR FIGHT ON COLONEL MAJOR.

As the progress of the fight on the confirmation of the nomination of Lieut. Col. Duncan Major to be colonel before the Senate committee approaches a climax it becomes more apparent that Massachusetts politics is almost solely responsible for the entire affair. It became known during the past week that Brig. Gen. Charles H. Cole and Col. Edward Logan, formerly of the 26th Division, were not really the instigators of the protest which was brought before the Senate Committee on Military Affairs.

While it cannot be said that General Cole and Colonel Logan have entirely forgotten their controversy with Colonel Major, it is stated upon the highest authority that if certain political leaders of Massachusetts had not forced an issue on the matter it would never have been taken up by the former officers of the 26th Division. They were really ready and willing to drop the affair and would not have appeared before the committee if they had not been summoned. But owing to some developments in Massachusetts politics, some of the Massachusetts members were forced into positions where they could not refuse to take up the matter for the Senate committee.

It is known that members of the Senate committee are of the opinion that as these matters are called to the attention of the Senate the strength of Colonel Major's side of the controversy will be greatly augmented. This accounts for much of the delay in reaching a vote on the nomination. It is insisted that in due time Colonel Major will be confirmed and the bloc for promotion will be removed.

NAVY OARSMEN WIN AGAIN.

Four records were broken and a fifth established in the eighteenth annual regatta of the American Rowing Association over the Henley one mile and five-sixteenths straightaway course on the Schuylkill River, Philadelphia, on May 27. A strong north wind favored the crews in the early contests, while a strong current aided them throughout.

Pennsylvania's victory in the 150-pound eights clipped 1-15 seconds from the record made by the Pennsylvania crew in 1920. The time was 6:41 2-5. Tom Rooney of the Undine Barge Club, Philadelphia, set a new mark of 7:52 4-5 in winning the second singles race. Vespers of Philadelphia broke a record in the interclub eight race, beating West Philadelphia in 6:45 1-5. The former mark of 6:51 1-5 was made by the University Barge Club of Philadelphia in 1912.

Undine Barge Club set a new record in the first double sculls race, beating Vespers in 7:20 3-5. The former mark of 7:28 2-5 was made by the New York Athletic Club in 1908. Episcopal Academy of Philadelphia established a record by winning the special mile inter-scholastic race from the Central High School of Washington, D.C., in 5:06 4-5.

The champion Navy crew beat Pennsylvania's varsity by two lengths in the feature for the first eight-oared crews. The time was 6:28 1-5. Pennsylvania managed to keep close to the Midshipmen for the first half-mile, with both crews rowing a forty-to-the-minute stroke; but in the last half-mile the strength of the midshipmen sent them ahead of their opponents. The Union Boat Club of Boston finished third.

In one of the most remarkable freshman eight-oared shell races ever seen on the Schuylkill, the Naval Academy plebes, stroked by Compton, beat Penn by five feet, amid the wild cheers of the big crowd. The rowing enthusiasts who jammed the finish line and on Peter's Island rooted in vain for the Red and Blue youths to keep their early lead over the Navy crew, but in the last quarter-mile the plebes won out.

FIELD DAY, CAMP ALFRED VAIL.

Whitmore, 14th Service Co., height, 5 ft. 4 ins.; 220-yard dash, Corpl. Zuschlag, Co. A, time 24 2-5 sec.; 220-yard low hurdle, Pvt. Doyle, 15th Service Co., time 32 sec.; one-mile run, Corpl. Walker, Co. B, time, 5 mins. 18 2-5 sec.; one-mile relay, Co. A, time, 4 mins. 11 2-5 sec. The sporting spirit of the various commands was of the highest type.

The Commandant's Cup, presented by Colonel Hemphill, camp commander, to be given to the winning team of the Camp Baseball League, consisting of the 51st Signal Battalion, 14th Service Co., 15th Service Co., Signal Corps and the "Yanks," composed of men from the Q.M.C., M.T.C., and Medical Department, is a prize worthy of the most earnest efforts of each individual team.

Great interest is being manifested at the camp in polo and a schedule had been prepared in which some of the best teams in the country will demonstrate the game during the summer. Two fine polo fields have been prepared and under the direction of Captain Morford, camp adjutant, two teams are being coached and with the good equipment will give a good account of themselves.

CHAMPION POLO TEAM.

The recent ruling of The Adjutant General that Reserves are eligible for all Army teams automatically gives the Army what probably is the champion polo team of the world. Most of the members of the American International champion polo team belong to the 61st Cavalry Division in the Organized Reserves, with headquarters in the Army Building, 39 Whitehall street, New York. Aside from this, there are a great many brilliant polo players in the Regular Establishment. It has been suggested that the Army challenge the other armies of the world. An international Service polo contest would be of absorbing interest.

DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON BASEBALL.

The 1922 schedule for the District of Washington Baseball Tournament, which will open on June 13, has been announced by the War Department. A number of rules and regulations have been promulgated for the guidance of both officials and players in governing the contests. The league is composed of teams representing Washington Barracks, Walter Reed General Hospital, Fort Myer, Va., Bolling Field and Fort Washington.

The athletic committee which will govern the tournament will be composed of the athletic officers of these posts and will be under the supervision of a representative appointed from the District of Washington headquarters. All officers, warrant officers, field clerks and enlisted men are eligible to compete. In accordance with the provisions of War Department Circular 156, 1920, post commanders will provide competent officials for all games played at their respective stations. Only commissioned officers will be used as umpires.

Spalding official rules for 1922 will govern the contests. Only in case of flagrant violations of the playing rules and unsportsmanlike conduct, will protests be considered. In such cases, they must be submitted in writing by post athletic officers through their post commanders to the baseball committee. The result of each game will be made either in writing or by telephone to the District of Washington headquarters on the day following the contest by the athletic officer of the station where the game is played.

No admission will be charged for any of the games. The rating of the teams will be on a percentage basis and the results published by District of Washington headquarters. At the end of the season an appropriate trophy will be awarded to the winner.

CAMP DIX BOXERS WIN.

The 1st Division boxing team carried off the 2d Corps Area boxing championship at Fort Slocum during the past week. The silver trophy, now on exhibition at the Enlisted Men's Club at Camp Dix, symbolizes the splendid efforts of the team to carry this much coveted prize to the home camp. Those representing the team were: Pvt. Jim Beard, 10th Inf., winner of the light heavyweight championship; Pvt. Vincent Lopez, Co. I, 16th Inf., winner of the middleweight championship; Pvt. John H. Miller, Service Co., 26th Inf., winner of the welterweight championship, and Private Marano, 1st Tank Co., runner-up in the lightweight championship.

"It is particularly gratifying to note the splendid interest displayed by all officers of the division in the athletic activities, and it is intended that the splendid efficiency of the representative teams of the division be maintained," says a correspondent.

GUARDSMEN WIN AT MEADE.

The field and track meet of the 3d Corps Area was held at Camp Meade on May 27 and resulted in a victory for the 5th Maryland National Guard, located in Baltimore, which scored fifty points. The Guardsmen were closely pushed by the sturdy athletes of the Tank Center of Camp Meade, who scored 48 1-3 points. No other teams were in sight to these two, though here and there a good individual athlete stood out.

NAVY DEFEATS ARMY.

With President Harding, Secretary of War Weeks, Attorney General Daugherty and many other officials of State, Army and Navy as spectators, the Naval Academy won on its own diamond May 29 from the Military Academy in a baseball game marked by desperate fighting. The score was 8 to 6.

The Navy took a big lead early, scoring four runs in the second, and driving Cragin to the dugout early in the third. The game became a mighty struggle, the Army players working most courageously to overcome the advantage, and keeping the midshipmen on their toes at all stages.

The Navy was given a big scare in the first, when the bases were filled with none out. The midshipmen pulled out of the hole, however, with only one run scored against them, and they evened things in their own half.

In the second, the Navy found Cragin effectually. With two out and Barchet on first, Kelly hit for a triple, and was scored by Harris. Rawlings was safe on Dasher's error, the two advanced on a passed ball and scored on Durgin's single.

Starting the seventh, with the score 7 to 3 against them, the Army staged a fine rally. In that session two runs were scored on Barchet's error, French's single, Storck's long fly and Dasher's triple. Another came in the eighth when Woods singled, stole second and crossed the plate on Goodman's single. The Army was blanked, however, in the final period.

The game followed lines which had been anticipated. Considerable scoring by the Army was expected. Kelly, however, fulfilled expectations, and pitched coolly and well, while the Navy batsmen rose to the occasion and made the game safe.

FORT SLOCUM SPORTS.

The corps area boxing championships were run off at Fort Slocum May 15, 16 and 18 under the direction of F. A. Wandle, the corps athletic representative, and Major Bartlett. Of the six championships Dix won three; Slocum two and Plattsburg one. Major Gens. R. L. Bullard and H. C. Hale, with their staffs, arrived for the finals and were entertained by Col. and Mrs. Melver. General Bullard presented diamond studded gold medals to the winners. All arrangements went without a hitch. On May 20 the ball team played the Crescent Athletic Club at Brooklyn. With the score 6 to 1 against them at the beginning of the eighth, Slocum scored a Garrison finish with three runs in the eighth and three in the ninth, winning 7 to 6.

RESERVES ELIGIBLE TO ARMY TEAMS.

In response to an inquiry as to the policy of the War Department, Col. R. C. Davis, Acting The Adjutant General, has issued a memorandum in which he states that the members of the Reserve Corps, both officers and enlisted men, are eligible to compete for places on teams which represent the Army in any games in which the Army as a unit may take part. Thus, in even the athletic games, the fact that the Reserves are one of the components of the Army of the United States is recognized.

FORT SNEELLING HORSE SHOW

HELD ON JUNE 1-2.

Spring social activities at Fort Snelling reached a climax when the horse show was staged June 1 and 2. A large number of St. Paul and Minneapolis men and women participated in the show, which was directed by Col. Alfred W. Bjornstad, U.S.A. Miss Mary McCone of Los Angeles, who was the house guest of Col. and Mrs. Bjornstad, was one of the popular members of the post to ride in the ladies' events. Mrs. O. S. Peabody, Mrs. H. J. Collins and Mrs. Henry L. Kinnison were among ten entrants to show their skill in horsemanship. Col. A. W. Bjornstad entered his Kentucky thoroughbred, "Sporting Extra," in several classes, and Capt. A. P. Fox his horse, "Pom Pom," Major H. J. Lawes entered "Get-Over-Laddie," and "Chico" was entered by his master, Major F. M. Brannon. Other expert riders included Lieut. Henry L. Kinnison, Lieut. H. M. Alexander, Lieut. F. T. Murphy, Capt. R. C. Tobin, Capt. O. S. Peabody and Capt. H. J. Collins.

Events Friday evening in which women participated were the three gaited class of saddle horses and a lightweight hunters' class. The ladies' primary three gaited class and the ladies' heavyweight hunter class were the features of the program on Saturday afternoon.

The show was given to interest the people of the Twin Cities in the activities of the fort and in furthering interest in horsemanship.

THIRTEEN STAR GRADUATES

IN NAVAL ACADEMY.

Thirteen of the 537 members of the first class of the Naval Academy will graduate with "star" rank, having obtained a multiple of eighty-five per cent. or over in scholastic and professional branches for the entire course.

Jerauld L. Olmstead, of Iowa, leads the class, his multiple being 762.35. Leonard Kaplan, of West Virginia, is second, with 736.43. The other "stars," with multiples in order of graduating rank, are: Ruthven V. Libby, Washington, 718.75; John A. Sweeton, New Jersey, 716.35; Francis H. Whitaker, Texas, 711.70; Carlyle L. Helber, Missouri, 710.16; Harry W. Pierce, Nebraska, 709.51; Clarence E. Voegel, Montana, 706.57; John J. B. Fulenwider, Delaware, 705.91; Dale Quanton, California, 705.77; Vincent J. SECOND TO BE COLOR COMPANY

AT U.S. NAVAL ACADEMY.

The Second company of the regiment of midshipmen, commanded by Midshipman William B. Ault, of Oregon, is the "color company" for next year, having been first in the competition in drills and professional exercises during the year. The Fifth company, commanded by Midshipman Emery E. Larson, of Minnesota, is second. In the competition for infantry drill, taking place during the present week, Larson's company was first and Ault's second, but points gained in other branches gave the final honor to the latter. Ault was formerly an enlisted man in the Navy and Larson had the same status in the Marine Corps. Ault captained the basketball team and Larson the football team, while both played on the lacrosse team.

FOUR MIDSHIPMEN HONORED BY

LETTERS FROM SUPERINTENDENT.

Four midshipmen of the graduating class—Francis H. Whitaker, Texas; Charles H. Steele, Texas; Alden R. Sanborn, Wisconsin, and William B. Ault, Oregon—have been signally honored by being made recipients of letters from Rear Admiral Henry B. Wilson, Superintendent of the Academy, designating them as the members of the class who had shown themselves peculiarly fitted to be officers of the Navy and as having by their careers at the Academy done much to promote the spirit of the institution and the Service.

These letters will be sent to the Navy Department and will become part of the service record of the young men who received them.

Retired Commissioned and Warrant Officers

THE indications are, as the JOURNAL goes to press, that the fight of those commissioned and warrant officers who have been or will be retired prior to July 1 of this year to be put on the same basis as those retired after that date has been lost.

Three reasons can be assigned; Congress is so behind in its work that it has been found necessary to cut off all attempts to change a bill after it has been agreed upon by a joint committee of both houses; many Congressmen believe that this arrangement will not affect any officers who served in the World War, and a belief that a certain amount of money will be saved.

The practical working of this means that a high ranking officer of long service retiring before July 1 will receive approximately a thousand dollars less a year than an officer of equal rank and practically the same service retiring a few days or weeks later. A considerable number of officers both commissioned and warrant with long, faithful service, including the Indian, Spanish-American and World Wars and the Philippine Insurrection, will be unfavorably affected.

A reasonable number of Civil War Veterans, including several retired for disabilities such as the loss of a leg or an arm, find themselves discriminated against. There are a number who have been awarded the Medal of Honor for great and exceptional gallantry in action. Included are Rowan, the message to Garcia hero of the Spanish-American War; Hare, who chased Aguinaldo all over Northern Luzon and finally rescued Gillmore of the Navy, and Isaacs, the naval hero of the sinking by a German submarine of the transport President Lincoln, who, after one unsuccessful attempt to escape from Germany by jumping off a train going forty miles an hour, finally got away by swimming the Rhine.

The increase of pay granted the Services in the present Pay bill is based solely upon the decreased purchasing power of the dollar. The dollar has shrunk just as much for the commissioned or warrant officer retired before July 1, as for the man now on the active list who will be retired after July 1.

The monetary difference could never compensate for the injustice perpetrated and the consequent effect upon the morale of the Army.

Foreign and Military Policies

THE military policy of a nation to be effective must be based upon the foreign policy of that country.

The foreign policy of a country to carry weight with foreign countries must be backed up by a commensurate military policy.

When a foreign policy is so backed up the occasion to use force is exceptional because other nations, knowing that the necessary force is available, hesitate to carry any discussion arising from the foreign policy to the point where that force will be used.

Since the outbreak of the World War in 1914 the United States has passed through a number of foreign political and military crises. Even a casual examination shows that the people as a whole have failed to understand the inevitable relationship between our foreign and military policies.

It even can be said with considerable justice that it has frequently been difficult to get the country to have definite foreign and military policies, let alone coordinated ones.

The ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL conceives its mission to be to promote in every possible way a better understanding of all questions having to do with national defense.

Therefore in this issue will be found a new department dealing with the Diplomatic and Consular Services of the United States. It is hoped that this will lead to closer relationship between these Services and the Regular Army and Navy in their everyday work for the country, and to a clearer understanding by the citizen soldier of the interrelationship of foreign affairs and our military policies, with the result that as his number steadily increases the country will possess an ever-growing body of voters with an intelligent understanding of these matters.

Then intelligent action will be a matter of course.

The Military Library of the Army and Navy Journal

EVERY American hates to admit the superiority of the European in any respect.

When it comes to military literature, as painful as it may be, the fact cannot be escaped that from a Continental European point of view military literature in this country, considering the number of subjects covered, the thoroughness with which covered, the number of authoritative writers, the quantity of books produced and the number of readers, can only be described as in its infancy.

In the first place, there are no big military publishing houses such as exist on the continent of Europe.

Of course, there are a number of reasons for this. On the Continent the publisher sends his books to thousands of retailers with the privilege of return in very much the same manner as we distribute our newspapers and periodicals, to newsstands. Here the retailer must buy his books outright. On the Continent military books are printed cheaply, with paper covers. An American lieutenant interested in Ludendorf has to pay, say, $12 for it. The value is there in the binding, the paper, the general excellent makeup. A French second lieutenant can buy Ludendorf, with commentaries by General Bunt, the French chief of staff, for six or seven francs. It is true it is cheaply gotten out and has a paper cover, but the officer seeking knowledge gets everything Ludendorf says, and in addition what General Bunt has to say about Ludendorf.

On the Continent a man interested in military literature can find it easily. Here it takes the most persistent search to get what there is in English, while the opening up of the many interesting and broad fields untouched in our language requires the knowledge of one or more foreign languages, sending money abroad, contact with foreign postal systems and the patience of Job.

We have tooth paste, life insurance policies, woman's lingerie, photographs, automobiles and chewing gum presented to us visually and by expert salesmen wherever we turn. Hunting military literature is like hunting for the proverbial needle in a hay-stack.

This country is full of men with the military instinct who would gladly read and study military literature if they knew where to find it.

Such reading and study would gradually remove the ignorance so prevalent with respect to things military which has so often in our past led us into the paths of defeat, undue prolongation of war, and unnecessary loss of money and life.

The ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL has started a Military Book Department which has already published a number of volumes written by American Army and Navy officers. It has made arrangements with a number of the leading French military publishing houses for the American rights to their works. It is gradually extending its foreign connections. It will do everything possible to encourage military authorship in this country.

Suggestions and criticisms of all kinds are and will be welcomed.

Schools for Army Children

THERE surely ought to be found some way to give the children of officers and enlisted men of the Army the same educational advantages that are enjoyed by the children of civilians. The children should not be penalized because their parents are serving the country.

It is not to be wondered at that Representative Bond of New York should be astonished as is indicated in his letter to the Secretary of War, which appeared in the last issue of this paper. Mr. Bond, who is a brother of Lieut. Col. John L. Bond, is thoroughly aroused and intends to follow up the matter until some solution is found. Doubtless, he will receive the support of Secretary Weeks and the authorities at the War Department. If legislation is necessary, Mr. Bond is of the opinion that it can be passed.

While it might be a good plan to provide special instructors for Service children, it would be a better plan if some arrangement can be made by which they can attend public schools in the vicinity of the posts. Where there are no schools and there are a sufficient number of children residing at a post, some steps should be taken by which schools could be established.

The course of study in the public schools is, to a large extent, a preparation for the higher institutions of learning. In most instances, diplomas from high schools entitle the students to enter colleges. The courses in the graded schools of the country are standardized so that pupils will lose no time when they are moved from one locality to another. This is important to Service children, who are frequently moved from one post to another.

Aside from this, the Army would be kept in closer touch with the people of the country if the Service children are educated in the public schools. In every way the former isolation of the Regular Army should be avoided as far as possible. This should be carried out in the education of the children of officers and men as well as in the general military policy of the country.

The record made by the Navy engineers ought to stop the arguments against the Navy advanced by the so-called economists.

It is a deplorable state of affairs when a great nation shirks its responsibilities as has been done in regard to retired pay for commissioned and warrant officers.

Some great crimes are being committed in the name of economy.

The horse will replace the Army mule at West Point next week.

The summer training camps will solve the vacation problem for thousands of sturdy young Americans.

A Warning from the Public

THE vote in the House on the Naval bill, the vote on the Service Pay bill and the great mass of resolutions passed by not only the veterans of the World War, but by patriotic organizations and business organizations, ought to make some impression on the War Department sub-committee on appropriations. When the Army Appropriation bill goes back to the House from the Senate the Appropriations Committee should be ready to yield on the important items for the Regular Army, National Guard, Organized Reserves and the Citizens' Training Camps.

The chief explanation that the Appropriations sub-committee gave for the drastic cuts made in the Army budget was that the country demanded them. It was argued by Messrs. Madden, Anthony, Sisson and Stafford that, as a result of the Arms Conference, the country insisted there should be reductions in the Service appropriations far below those made by the Director of the Budget. General Dawes made a radical reduction in all of the department's estimates, but that was not sufficient to satisfy the country, according to the report of Chairman Anthony of the sub-committee.

This claim has not been sustained by the expressions received from every walk of life throughout the country, and especially from the men who won the war. The Army Appropriation bill was reported out and passed before the country became aware of what had happened. When it was advised of what the House proposed to do to the defenses of the nation there were expressions of genuine alarm throughout the country. Before the Navy and Service Pay bills came up the House members began to hear from their constituents. As the result, the Appropriations Committee was defeated when the test came on both bills.

The United States Chamber of Commerce, in its resolutions, expressed the general attitude of the country. This national organization of the business men who have been the most insistent upon economy in government expenditures commended the work of the Arms Conference and strongly protested against the House program for a reduction in the personnel of the Army and Navy. Messrs. Madden, Anthony, Sisson and Stafford should realize by this time that the country is thinking clearly on the subject. Americans now generally know that nothing happened at the Arms Conference which makes it safe for the country to totally disarm.

The country is beginning to realize that it is even doubtful if the results of the Arms Conference justify even a reduction in armament. The failure to date of Great Britain, France, Japan and Italy to ratify the treaties emphasizes this lack of trust.

Lieut. Col. George E. Lovell, Cav., U.S.A., sends in the following clipping from the Joliet (Ill.) News-Herald with the notation that he did not think this item of military interest should be hidden from the rest of the Army:

"Q. What is the military crest of a mountain?—J.S."

"A. A crest of a mountain is the top line, and a military crest is the highest point at which it is possible to make a pass or trail over the mountain."

NEWS OF THE NATIONAL GUARD

MASSACHUSETTS.

The annual report of the Massachusetts Volunteer Militia for the year ending Dec. 31, 1921, in bound form, compiled by Brig. Gen. Jesse F. Stevens, The Adjutant General, has been received by the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL.

It is a well arranged and valuable report of 278 pages with index. The report among other things states that the Federally recognized militia of the state on Dec. 31, 1921, numbered 125 units, aggregating 479 officers and 6,976 men, which was well ahead of the schedule.

"Owing to lack of funds on the part of the Militia Bureau," says General Stevens, "no additional units can be organized at this time, with the exception of two companies of auxiliary engineers. All organizations have performed their fifteen days' tour of camp duty, with the exception of the Infantry brigade headquarters and the division Air Service. Reports of Army instructors attached to the several organizations have been most commendatory. It is evident that the organizations are doing their work well and will soon be in excellent condition.

"Some shortage of equipment is still apparent; this, in some cases, is due to failure on the part of accountable officers to follow up their requisitions, and, in part, to slowness of the Army in filling requisitions.

"Accountable officers must exercise more care over the property issued to them. There has been a large loss of property which is entirely unnecessary. Accountable officers will be held to a strict accountability for the property issued to them. The custom of allowing men to wear shoes and shirts at times other than for purposes of drill must not be permitted. Such use of military property is not authorized, and officers who permit such use will be held accountable and will have to replace articles worn out by other than military use. An improvement must also be made in paper work."

General Stevens states that considerable progress has been made in instructing the new units of the National Guard in rifle work. The National Guard team of Massachusetts won the United States championship among National Guard teams, and, in addition, made fourth place in the National Team Match, being beaten only by three Service teams.

Instructors from the Regular Army on duty with the Massachusetts National Guard are thus complimented by General Stevens: "Massachusetts is still fortunate in having as instructors from the Regular Army a fine lot of officers who are working hard to increase the efficiency of the Guard, and who realize some of the problems a National Guard organization has to contend with in its attempt to obtain efficiency. Every recognized organization now has an instructor, except the Air Service."

NEW JERSEY.

The units of the 102d Cavalry, N.J.N.G. (1st Cavalry, N.J.), located in Westfield, under Major William A. Ross, held its second anniversary dinner on May 18 at the Shackamaxon Country Club, and the event proved a great success.

Some ninety persons attended including influential citizens of the county, who have been giving the Cavalry organization their active support. Assemblyman Arthur N. Pierson, Mr. George Teller of Cranford, chairman of County Board of Freeholders, Mayor Littlefield of Westfield, Mr. Charles N. Coddling, Surrogate of Union County, and Mr. Leigh M. Pearson of Westfield were among the number. They spoke enthusiastically of the Cavalry post in Westfield and assured the troopers that they would work just as hard to obtain an armory for them within the next year as they did to obtain the armory site in the year past.

This site on Rahway avenue between First street and Dorian road has now been purchased by the county, turned over to the state and is in possession of the Cavalry. There are no buildings on it as yet. On the afternoon of Decoration Day a gymkhana and a horse show were held. The local American Legion Post undertook the business management of the show and there was a large attendance. The horse show classes, included two for children, one for saddle horses, one for hunters and jumpers open and one for troopers closed. There were long lists of entries including some for the hunter's class from the Peapack Hunting Set in Morristown and Far Hills.

NATIONAL GUARD NOTES.

Organizations of the New York National Guard and Naval Militia are now busy shooting on outdoor ranges, and it is expected that the end of the season will see a large increase of qualified marksmen over the figures of last year.

STRENGTH OF N.G. FIRST FIVE MONTHS.

In a memorandum dated May 17, prepared by the office of the Chief of the Militia Bureau of the War Department, some interesting figures are given as to the strength of the National Guard for the first five months of 1922. It shows not only the recognized strength by months, but also a comparison of gains and losses by months, and the same tabulation relative to units.

Since Jan. 1, 1922, the National Guard, with a recognized strength of 138,862 officers and men, has gradually increased month by month until on May 1 of this year the strength of the Guard was 147,696, or a total net gain of 8,834. The month of February showed the greatest gain, 4,563 new names being added to the rosters of the different organizations.

April showed the greatest decrease in enlistments, 1,983 names being dropped from the rolls.

In the number of units granted federal recognition the month of February leads with a figure of 80, April is second with 71, and January and March are each credited with 69. The following is a tabulation of the recognized strength by the months named in 1922, and also the gains and losses by months in the same year:

STATE OF WASHINGTON.

According to a statement made from the office of The Adjutant General of the National Guard of the state of Washington, on May 11, the retention of Camp Lewis, Wash., as a Regular Army post as well as a training center, has been assured Seattle National Guard organizations which have taken an active part in the fight to keep Regular troops at the camp.

Major Gen. Charles G. Morton, U.S.A., commanding the 9th Corps Area, who inspected the camp May 6, said that as many men as possible would be kept at Camp Lewis.

General Morton was accompanied by Lieut. Col. Kenyon A. Joyce, chief of staff of the 9th Corps Area. The inspection of Camp Lewis was also made by Brig. Gen. William Lassiter, U.S.A., Chief of Operations for the General Staff and special representative of the Secretary of War, who was sent out from Washington to look over the big cantonment.

While in Seattle General Morton inspected Fort Lawton and reviewed the R.O.T.C. units at the University of Washington in addition to meeting the officers of the Association of the Army of the United States.

The 489th Co. Coast Art., of Aberdeen, will move into its quarters in the armory now nearing completion, on June 15. The company now numbers sixty-eight men and under Capt. Frank Partridge will be recruited up to ninety-seven men.

Records in the office of The Adjutant General of the state of Washington show that on May 1 there were 138 officers and 2,273 enlisted men in the Washington National Guard, virtually half of whom are members of the 161st Infantry.

The troops are divided as follows: State Staff Corps and Departments, eight officers and two enlisted men; 161st Infantry, 52 officers and 1,111 enlisted men; 146th Field Artillery, 45 officers and 599 enlisted men; Coast Artillery, eight officers and 191 enlisted men; Corps Artillery, four officers and 108 enlisted men; Cavalry (machine gun), four officers and 98 enlisted men; Medical units, twelve officers and 88 enlisted men; Tank Corps, four officers and 76 enlisted men, and additional officers, one, Infantry.

The rifle team of the National Guard, state of Washington, defeated seven of the best teams in Eastern Washington in a recent shoot held at Fort George Wright, making a total score of 1,562 out of a possible 1,800. The members of the team were McGinnis, Ladd, Jackson, Pray, Graham and Bryan. Sergeant McGinnis was high man of the shoot, making 271 out of a possible 300.

The five other teams taking part were the Wallace Rifle Club, which finished second with a score of 1,558; Fort George Wright No. 1, third, 1,548; Fort George Wright No. 2, fourth, 1,526; Pullman Rifle Club, fifth, 1,526; Manito Pistol and Rifle Club, sixth, 1,517; Washington State College, R.O.T.C., seventh, 1,501, and Veterans of Foreign Wars, eighth, 1,357. The shooting was at 200, 300, 500 and 600 yards, slow fire, and 200 and 300 yards, rapid fire, ten shots per man at each range.

This is the third year the Spokane team has taken part in the Eastern Washington match, but the first time it has finished in first place.

(now 212th Artillery) and their friends are expected to be present in the armory in New York city, Thursday night, June 8, at the unveiling of the memorial tablet erected to the memory of those men of the 12th who gave up their lives for their country.

Brig. Gen. George R. Dyer, a former colonel of the 12th, will be the guest of honor of the Veteran Association. The ceremonies will commence at eight o'clock sharp and will be followed by a review of the 212th Artillery (old 12th), under command of Col. N. B. Burr.

LIEUT. COL. EDWARD DAVIS, CAV., IS ON LECTURE TOUR.

Lieut. Col. Edward Davis, office Chief of Cavalry, and military observer for the United States Government during the Palestine and Syrian campaigns with the British army under the command of General Allenby, left Washington May 20 to deliver lectures to the Infantry School, General Service Schools and the Cavalry School. He will also deliver lectures to the officers of the National Guard, Organized Reserves in Atlanta, Ga.; Birmingham, Ala.; New Orleans, La.; Kansas City, Mo.; St. Louis, Mo.; Chicago, Ill.; Columbus, Ohio, and Pittsburgh, Pa., before returning to his desk in Washington.

The United States Army Reserve Officer;
His Duties, Privileges and Responsibilities

The following article will explain many points that are not fully understood in regard to the status of Reserve officers. It was written by Major Charles L. Williams, U.S.A., U.S.A., who is in charge of the Organized Reserves work in Delaware. This article is the second of two by Major Williams. The first appeared in the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL of May 27.

The National Defense law on which our present Army policy is based was put into its present form by the act of Congress of June 4, 1920. The general principles of this law were briefly outlined in this paper on May 27, and certain concrete questions were set forth, representing what is believed to be the information most in demand among men who are considering the question of applying for commissions in the Officers' Reserve Corps. These questions are repeated below and answers thereto follow the respective questions.

(a) What qualifications must a man possess to render him eligible for a commission as a Reserve officer?

Ans.: In general, the same basic qualifications as required for a commission in the Regular Army or National Guard, i.e., he must be physically sound and of good moral character, and have a high school education or better, and possess the necessary qualities of leadership, tactical ability and physical endurance required of all officers on duty with troops. It is not to be expected, however, that new appointees shall be wholly proficient in the details of their offices; the main consideration is the possession of the basic qualities and ability to master details through reference to manuals and by personal instruction at camps or through individual instruction.

Chance for Commission.

Until Nov. 11, 1923, ex-officers of the World War who were honorably discharged and enlisted men of the World War who were recommended for a commission will be commissioned upon their application without mental examination. After the above date candidates will be required to attend a training camp, or in lieu of this pass a mental examination covering the duties of the grade and arm in which they seek a commission.

Enlisted men of the World War who were not recommended for a commission must attend a Citizens' Military Training Camp before being eligible for a commission in Infantry, Cavalry, Field Artillery, Coast Artillery and Air Service.

Civilians who have had no military training must attend Citizens' Military Training Camp and enlist in the Enlisted Reserve Corps before being eligible for a commission. They need not serve as enlisted men for any specified length of time, however, the enlistment being merely a step required in the procedure of obtaining the commissioned grade.

Graduates of the military course which is conducted at many colleges and universities, known as the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, are eligible, upon recommendation of the institution, for commissions in the arm in which trained.

Appointees must be citizens of the United States, between 21 and 60 years of age.

Federally recognized National Guard officers, although eligible for commissions in the Reserve Corps, are not eligible for active duty with the Organized Reserves in peace times. In time of war, however, National Guard officers who hold Reserve commissions will continue in their commissioned grades in the Reserve Corps, and their National Guard commissions will be vacated. All commissions in war time must be either in the Regular Army or in the Reserve Corps.

Responsibilities of Officers.

(b) What responsibilities must a man assume if he becomes a Reserve officer?

Ans.: 1. He must be willing to attend the Reserve Officers' Camp, which is held for fifteen days annually, but he will not be required to attend if he presents proper reasons showing that such attendance would work hardship because of interference with his business or other affairs.

2. He will be invited to pursue a correspondence course in the important branches of his arm of the Service. Such courses are not obligatory, however, but they form the most practicable means of acquiring knowledge during the period between the annual fifteen-day encampments.

3. He will be expected to assist, as far as practicable, in securing properly qualified men for the non-commissioned grades of his organization. Organizations in peace times are not to be recruited beyond the non-commissioned grades, including the "specialists" required in such arms as the Artillery. This duty is not, however, obligatory.

4. Should there be an important military activity within convenient distance of his home, as, e.g., target practice with artillery, he will be invited to attend as a spectator, but will, upon application, have the privilege of being attached to the organization of the Regular Army firing.

5. In general, he will be expected to keep in as close touch with the activities and interests of his arm of the Service as circumstances permit, and in doing this he will do well to subscribe to the military magazine pertaining to his particular arm and to a general service newspaper, such as the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL. An occasional visit to a nearby Regular Army post is advised, where Reserve officers are assured of being welcome at all times.

6. When in attendance at camps he must provide his uniform, consisting, normally, of O.D. woolen shirts, khaki breeches, leggings, shoes, hat, etc. The olive drab woolen uniform will rarely be needed in peace times by Reserve officers under the present plans.

Pay, Allowances, etc.

(c) What privileges, pay, allowances, etc., go with a commission as a Reserve officer?

Ans.: During the annual fifteen-day camp full pay of his grade is drawn by a Reservist, and mileage at seven cents paid to and from camp. Mess expenses are very nominal. The camp itself will be a privilege that will be more than a military feature to many who might not otherwise be able to enjoy an outing. The advantages of such camps are too well known to require detailed remarks.

Reserve officers are privileged to apply for permission to fire small arms practice with nearby Regular organizations; likewise, Coast Artillery Reservists have the same privileges as regards attendance at firing of artillery guns during Coast Artillery target practice.

Reserve officers are at all times welcome to visit Regular Army posts for the purpose of familiarizing themselves with methods, personnel and material.

(d) How much time is required (in peace time) in the performance of the duties of a Reserve officer?

Ans.: This question is answered under (b) above, as nearly as it is possible to do.

Length of Commission.

(e) How long does a Reserve commission last, and how is it renewed?

Ans.: Appointments shall in every case be for a period of five years, unless sooner terminated. Upon termination, reappointment without change of grade or section will, in general, be tendered without application.

(f) What grade (rank) does a Reserve officer hold in peace times, and how can he secure promotion?

Ans.: A Reserve officer may be appointed to the highest grade held by him in the Army during his prior service. If he has had no prior commissioned service, however, he is eligible for grade of second lieutenant only, unless, in the case of arms other than Infantry, Artillery, Cavalry and Air Service, he was previously recommended for a higher grade.

Promotion is secured, in peace times, through a prescribed examination and after service of three years has been completed in the officer's present grade. Service during the war period counts double.

Applying for Commission.

(g) What steps are necessary in applying for a commission as a Reserve officer, and to whom should application be made?

Ans.: After satisfying himself as to his eligibility, a candidate must be physically examined, according to the form provided for this purpose, and submit this form, properly attested by the examining physician, with the application form.

(h) Why is it the duty of men of proper qualifications to apply for Reserve commissions in peace times?

Ans.: The answer to this question is the fundamental principle of the present Army policy as announced in the act of June 4, 1920. It has been expressed by many of our ablest statesmen, officers, public men and editors in words of eloquence and deep conviction. It is believed that the great majority of our thinking, patriotic men are in sympathy with this policy, which is planned with the view to insuring as far as possible against recurrence of the stupendous waste in time, money and life that was incident to our lack of definite plans for mobilization, and of trained officer personnel prior to the entrance of the United States into the World War. The development of our present policy will insure, with the minimum of expense to the country and to individuals, against another such upheaval as we experienced in 1917, in almost every phase of our national life, which could have been very largely mitigated had a matured policy such as the present one been in effect during the years prior to the recent conflict. The present policy was largely the result of the demands made by the returning soldiers, who realized better than any other class what lack of training meant when its evils were developed in actual warfare.

The General Plan.

Each community throughout our land has been assigned its own part to perform in the development of this policy. Under the policy it is planned to secure officers for organizations and to enlist only the number of men to supply the non-commissioned grades, with perhaps a few additional men specially qualified in some special line of work. The important part of the plan at present is the building up of the nucleus of officers. The enlisted personnel will never be fully secured in peace times, nor is it desired that it shall; such a procedure would be entirely contrary to the policy, which requires preparedness on the part of the officers to take intelligent command, if the occasion shall again arise, of the enlisted men of our war Army.

Officers commissioned in the O.R.C. are invited to apply to the AMERICAN ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL for interpretations of any of the Reserve Corps Regulations as to the meaning of which they are in doubt.

Officers' Reserve Corps

RESERVE OFFICERS' SCHOOL.

A successful school of two weeks' duration for organization commanders of the Reserves was completed on May 20 at the headquarters of the 4th Army Corps, Atlanta, Ga. The school was under the direction of Col. William R. Dashiell, Inf., who kept the students busy both morning and afternoon.

The following Reserve officers were in attendance: Lieut. Col. Martin H. Foss, J.A.G., and Joseph Lee, Q.M.C.; Majors Stanley Howland, A.G., Charles M. Jenkins, Warren E. Hall, Engrs., James A. Grant, Engrs., John W. Morris, Med., John M. Whitfield, Med., Ross C. Speir, Med., Stuart Coleman, F.A., and Arthur W. Merkel, C.A.; Capt. Turner F. Schaufele, Q.M., Jefferson B. Osborn, Cav., George H. Heakes, Engrs., Robert G. Stephens, A.S., Hilliard E. Griffin, Med., and Daniel E. Murphy, C.A.

RHODE ISLAND RESERVE CONFERENCE.

On active duty for the day, officers of the Rhode Island units of the 76th Division already in process of formation, the 385th Infantry, 302d Field Artillery and the 301st Engineers, participated in a conference at the Rhode Island State Armory, in Providence on May 27, which was addressed by members of the staff from headquarters at Hartford, Conn., by commanders of the units and other officers.

The gathering, which followed successive meetings in Bridgeport, Hartford and New Haven, brought together for the first time the commissioned personnel already assigned or in process of assignment to the Reserve commands in Rhode Island. As a result of its marked success, future conferences will be held.

An outstanding feature of the meeting was the inspiration drawn from it by the former officers who have already come forward to do their part in perpetuating the state's high military record through service in the newly formed Reserve units.

"We do wrong to underrate the Reserve service. It is a real service, of definite value. It is not a paper organization, but a live, going concern. The country at large looks to the Reserve as a big national asset," said Lieut. Col. Emerson G. Taylor, assistant chief of staff, G-3, in leading the Rhode Island units for their progress, and urging a feeling of pride in the division.

The Reserve system was characterized by Lieut. Col. G. Edward Buxton, Jr., commanding the 385th Infantry, as the "only possible way to capitalize what we so painfully learned between 1917 and 1919."

"It means the end of the political officer in time of war, and the saving of countless thousands of lives if war of any magnitude ever comes," he declared. "It is something on which to start a tradition," he emphasized.

Other speakers were Col. George H. Cameron, Cav., U.S.A., chief of staff of the 76th Division; Major W. L. Roberts, U.S.A., division adjutant; Major William F. Hoy, U.S.A., who is in charge of the formation of Reserve units in this state; Major Harold R. Barker, commanding the 302d Field Artillery and 2d Field Artillery; Major James H. Johnson, commanding the 1st Battalion, 301st Engineers, and 1st Lieut. Howard H. Quinham of Battery A, 302d Field Art., who has just completed a course at Fort Sill.

Emphasis was laid upon the desirability of Reserve officers in Rhode Island doing all in their power to assist in obtaining applicants for the citizens' military training camps, which will be "reservoirs" for the future commissioned personnel of the Reserve units. Details of the Reserve organization were thoroughly discussed.

Other staff officers present from Hartford were Lieut. Col. Hamilton R. Horsey, G-2; Major L. B. Barbour, assistant adjutant; Major Skerrett, quartermaster; Major W. E. Wilmerding, Med. Corps, U.S.A., and Major W. E. Pearson, Q.M.C., U.S.A., who is executive officer for the quartermaster and for the Air Service of the division.

REFLECTIONS ON THE ORGANIZED RESERVES.

The Reserve Army should have the support of all except the most confirmed pacifists.

Five-sixths of the Army officers in case of war will be Reserve and National Guard officers. In time of peace they have a dual capacity: their civil business is their vocation—the Army is their avocation.

In other words the preponderant proportion of Army officers is composed of men who are not professional soldiers but, on the contrary, are professional civilians.

These citizen-officers do not want war, but they do want to be prepared if war is forced upon us.

If the Reserve Army is to mean anything it must, first of all, have a meaning for the Reserve officer and the Reserve enlisted man.

To have this meaning, it must be regarded seriously as one of the three essential military components for the national defense—the Regular Army, the National Guard and the Organized Reserves.

This serious regard involves the following:

(a) Detail in sufficient numbers of properly equipped officers of the Regular Army to carry on the routine work and to act as instructors.

(b) The assurance of equitable promotion.

(c) A Reserve Corps composed of qualified officers.

(d) Training as provided by the National Defense act.

(e) A realization on the part of each Reserve officer that his commission is a commission in the Army of the United States and that he is on a parity with officers of any branch whatsoever of that Army.

Don't think or say that the Reserve Army won't make good. It must make good.

Don't depreciate your commission by feeling that perhaps it is rather small potatoes after all. It isn't. It is big and the Reserve Army is big. Give it your confidence, enthusiasm and support.

Be proud of your commission.

It is something of which to be proud as constant evidence of your steadfast citizenship and unselfish readiness to serve when national defense makes it necessary.

T. J. POWERS, Chief of Staff,
85th Division.

Naval Militia

NEW YORK

The New York Naval Militia, of which Commodore Robert P. Forshaw is commander, has been active in sending out the Eagle boats and subchasers assigned it on week-end cruises, and they returned to port in time for the men to participate in the Decoration Day parade.

Arrangements have been made for crew of Naval Militia to take the Sturgeon Bay, a former Shipping Board vessel turned over to the Navy Department, from Norfolk Navy Yard to Buffalo, where she will be used as an armory for that portion of the Naval Militia located at Buffalo.

The Marines of the 1st, 2d and 3d Battalions of Naval Militia, stationed at New York, Brooklyn and Rochester, respectively, comprising approximately 175 officers and men, are to proceed to U.S. Marine Corps rifle range at Wakefield, Mass., for a fifteen-day tour of camp duty on June 10.

The 1st Battalion and the 7th Separate Division of Naval Militia attached to headquarters at New Rochelle, N.Y., are going to Peekskill for the annual small arms practice on June 16, and the 2d Battalion at Brooklyn, 6th Separate Division at Whitestone, 8th Separate Division at Ossining and the 11th Separate Division at Staten Island are going on June 17.

RECRUITING RETURNS.

The following table shows the number of completed applications filed for the Citizens' Military Training Camps, according to official reports:

Corps Area.	Applications received May 10.	May 20.
1st	148	510
2d	1,132	1,402
3d	688	1,252
4th	1,303	1,860
5th	571	938
6th	705	1,065
7th	1,162	1,579
8th	759	1,216
9th	413	580
Total	6,861	10,402

While 10,000 applications on May 30 are disappointingly few, with a campaign that was announced to close on June 1, on the other hand, it must be remembered that as compared with last spring, this was the number (10,000) that had been obtained by the Military Training Camps Association up to June 20. In other words, the efforts to speed-up the early recruiting for this year's camps have resulted in advancing the applications one full month. It is clear that, given an extension of time for the recruiting period, it is yet possible, with hard work, to secure a total application of 30,000, with, at least, a minimum over-application of fifty per cent. But to secure this the united efforts of military men and civilians, which are now hard at work, must be kept up.

A most thorough system of publicity is being used in the 8th Corps Area. Lieut. Col. Henry Chase Lewis, U.S.A., who is in charge, is sending out application blanks and circulars of information to the following: 2,000 surplus candidates of 1921, 5,500 Reserve officers, 450 National Guard officers, 400 retired non-commissioned officers, 450 M.T.C. Association local chairmen, 600 American Legion Posts, 150 Y. M.C.A. organizations, 600 high schools and colleges, 1,000 Chambers of Commerce, Rotary Clubs, Kiwanis Clubs, Lions' Clubs, Canopus Clubs, etc.

Colonel Lewis eliminates the military as far as possible, and has civilians write to civilians. For instance, he has the Shriners, Masons, etc., write to all their people on their own papers, under their own signature, calling their attention to the opportunities offered young men at these camps. These letters he prints for them on mimeographs to save time and expense. With the allowance recently made for mileage and expenses, trucks are being used to carry officers and recruiting parties from Army posts in the area to all nearby points. It is impossible to go into details and do justice to his efforts. All newspapers in the corps area are being systematically given information.

7TH INFANTRY ENTERTAINS R.O.T.C.

The 7th Infantry, Camp Lewis, Wash., was host on May 12, 13 and 14 to the R.O.T.C. unit of the University of Washington. The greater part of the first day at the camp was taken up with the assignment of the visitors to quarters. In the evening motion pictures of the 3d Division in the A.E.F. were shown. The second day's routine included a review, including all transportation, general inspection and a demonstration of infantry in the attack. This demonstration was on a large scale and included the use of hand and rifle grenades, one-pounder, trench mortar, machine guns, automatic rifles, tracer ammunition and tanks. There was also a demonstration of gas warfare.

In a letter to Col. Thomas M. Anderson, U.S.A., commanding officer of the 7th Regiment, Brig. Gen. G. B. Duncan, U.S.A., in commenting on the infantry demonstration, said:

"The excellent program arranged by you for the R.O.T.C. students from the University of Washington during their two days' visit to your regiment, reflected in high degree the excellent spirit of the 7th Infantry under your leadership.

"The demonstration of military activities of the daily life of the soldier were finely rendered; that of a platoon in attack was the best I have ever witnessed. "Accept this word of appreciation of the discipline and training shown by your regiment."

Sunday was the last day of the visit. A sport program was given in the morning and the afternoon was spent in preparation for departure.

The Artillery unit of the school visited Fort Casey in Puget Sound, while the Infantry and Air Service were at Camp Lewis.

The men from the Artillery arm boarded a government boat at the water front of Seattle at 8 a.m. on Friday, May 12, and after a four-hours' ride up Puget Sound disembarked at Fort Casey. Immediately they were assigned to barracks. Following this the 101 students were taken on a trip of explanation and demonstration about the gun and mortar batteries of the fort. They inspected the magazines and witnessed the loading of projectiles. The Regular troops at the fort fired a problem for the visitors on the five-inch guns. On Friday evening the post commander gave a lecture on the coast defenses of Puget Sound, stressing particularly the readiness of the forts on the sound to go into immediate action in case of hostilities.

On Saturday morning the students manned the batteries at gun drill, following a demonstration drill by the Regular troops. In the afternoon the students fired a problem in sub-caliber practice on the ten-inch guns, making six hits out of sixteen shots fired at a moving target one and one-half miles away. The men also fired over the rifle range in the course of the afternoon. Among the social festivities engaged in at the fort were a baseball game, dance and motion picture show.

UNIVERSITY OF DELAWARE.

The R.O.T.C. of the University of Delaware, located at Newark, Del., held an interesting field day on May 25, when a program of varied events was enjoyed.

Co. B, cadet captain, A. B. Magee, won the competitive drill. After a trench mortar demonstration, under Cadet M. H. Carter, the class of 1925 gave the following exhibitions: Shelter tent pitching, under Cadet J. H. Deputy; bayonet exercises, under Cadet H. Pikus; calisthenics, under Cadet Capt. T. M. Keith; attack on M.G. nest by combat patrol, under Cadet Paul P. Steele.

Major Gen. James H. Wilson, U.S.A., reviewed the battalion in command of Cadet Major J. H. Harper. There were presentations of prizes by Hon. William D. Denney, Governor of Delaware, donor, and by the Hon. T. Coleman du Pont, U.S. Senator, donor.

The C.O. of the military department of the university is Major Lathe B. Row, Inf., and his assistants are Capt. Gabriel T. Mackenzie, Inf.; Capt. Roy Sparks, Inf., all U.S.A.; 1st Sergt. John Fraser, U.S.A., retired, and Sergt. Aubrey E. Davis, U.S.A.

LOUISIANA STATE UNIVERSITY.

A picturesque ball was given by the R. O.T.C. unit of the Louisiana State University recently. The use of shelter tents, pitched around the hall, crossed swords, one-pounder, and rifles supporting the national and battalion colors and flags made a military appearance. The dance was opened by the bugle sounding reveille and closed by the sounding of taps. A feature of the evening was an exhibition drill in close order and the manual of arms by a platoon of selected cadets.

CORNELL WINS PISTOL MATCH, R.O.T.C.

The pistol team of the R.O.T.C., Cornell University Field Artillery, has won the competitive shoot against twenty-four teams from other institutions of learning, maintaining military units, including the U.S.M.A.

Cornell's total was 63,050 points, against 52,385 points made in the aggregate by their opponent. The highest possible score was 70,000 points.

OREGON A.O. GYMKHANA.

The Faculty Riding Club of Oregon Agricultural College, organized by the military department, sponsored a gymkhana for the Cavalry and Field Artillery units, which was held on the college pastures on May 20. Places in events were given a value of, first, five points; second, three points; third, two points; and fourth, one point. The Field Artillery unit secured the greatest number of points, 36, and received the Faculty Riding Club trophy, a bronze statue of an armored horseman. The unit winning this trophy three times is to retain it permanently. The Cavalry got 30 points.

Harry Kerron, M.F.H., of the Portland Hunt Club, assisted Col. G. W. Moses, Cav., D.O.L., P.M.S. and T., as judge of the events.

WAUKEGAN HIGH SCHOOL.

In a general statement to headquarters, 6th Corps Area, concerning work of the R.O.T.C. unit, Paul G. W. Keller, principal of the Waukegan Township High School, said:

"The success of the work done in military training at Waukegan (Ill.) Township High School has been very gratifying the past year. There has been a steady growth in interest in the work; in development of courses and time given for the work and thoroughness and completeness of the program.

"The work is making a distinct contribution to the efficiency of the school in respect for orderly and effective school activity, courtesy to fellow students, faculty and officers, appreciation of the value of acquiring personal habits of conduct, dress and response, a willingness to accept civic responsibility and a consciousness that leadership is the greatest field of endeavor open to young men."

UNIVERSITY OF DAYTON.

The senior Infantry R.O.T.C. unit of the University of Dayton, located at Dayton, Ohio, held its third annual encampment at Hills and Dales Park, near Dayton, during the week of May 22 to 27. Approximately 500 students spent the week in camp.

The students were given a real taste of SEAPLANE IS LAUNCHED FROM U.S.S. MARYLAND.

Naval officers attached to the Bureau of Aeronautics, of which Rear Admiral W. A. Moffett is chief, are greatly pleased with the successful launching of the Service type seaplane, carrying a pilot and passenger, from an airplane catapult on the deck of the U.S.S. Maryland, the country's largest and most powerful battleship. The catapult, recently perfected by the Aviation branch of the Navy, made the test at Yorktown, Va.

The project of catapulting planes from a ship was first effected in 1915 on board the U.S.S. North Carolina, followed in 1916 by further experiments on the U.S.S. Huntington. The equipment used in those days was, however, too cumbersome and not sufficiently powerful to suit the needs of fighting ships and modern high-speed planes. Consequently work was begun to produce a more compact and powerful mechanism which would perform that military function which even at that time it was evident would become an essential part of the duties of a man-of-war—the launching of protective and observation aircraft from its deck. The war, with its insistent demand for quantity production of patrol seaplanes for anti-submarine work, curtailed experiments on this project and it was not until last spring that the work, of which the successful performance of May 24 was the result, was started.

This device gives the United States a point of superiority over every other Navy in the world in that none of them is in possession of an apparatus of this sort.

It is the intention to equip every vessel of the battle fleet with a catapult and fighting planes.

The Maryland, commanded by Capt. D. F. Sellers, U.S.N., is now at Annapolis, where she will remain until June 3, when she sails for Newport, R.I.

OFFICERS DESIRE CIVILIAN DRESS FOR OFFICE DUTIES.

Medical authorities in certain quarters have contended that the high collar and the tight leather puttee of Army uniforms are not conducive to the best interest of hygiene. Although the War Department has been silent on the prospect of allowing officers to wear civilian clothing while on office duty during the summer months, there are many officers in the Service who would welcome an order granting them such a boon.

A change to light and loose civilian clothes would be welcome to all. There are many officers who are contemplating the purchasing of new summer outfits and it would mean a lot to these officers if a change is contemplated that it be issued soon, thus relieving them of the added expense of buying two, a civilian suit and a cotton O.D.

Army life during the week. Hundreds of citizens of Dayton visited the camp. On account of wet weather it was necessary for the students to hike back to Dayton a day earlier than was planned. This made it impossible to stage the sham battle and field maneuvers which were planned.

Major James R. Hill, Cav., U.S.A., P. M.S. & T., was in command of the camp. As far as was practicable, the administrative details were left in the hands of the student officers. A Regular Army officer was assigned to each company as instructor.

Major Hill has been granted a three months' leave of absence. He and his family will start their motoring trip to the Pacific coast about June 7.

DECISION AS TO COMMISSIONS.

Student Henry D. Green completed the prescribed course for the Senior Advanced R.O.T.C. with the exception of about forty hours of minor tactics. He left school on March 16, 1922, before completion of the prescribed course. A decision was requested of the War Department as to whether this student was eligible for a commission in the O.R.C. The War Department in Second Indorsement, A.G.O., dated April 26, 1922, File 201, Green, Henry D., rendered the following decision:

"The law requires that an R.O.T.C. student be eligible for appointment in the Officers' Reserve Corps must have satisfactorily completed the prescribed course of military training and be favorably recommended for such appointment by the professor of military science and tactics. The law does not specify the length of time it shall take for a student to complete the prescribed course. If in the opinion of the professor of military science and tactics Mr. Green has completed the necessary training for the R.O.T.C. he may receive his commission."

BIRMINGHAM HIGH SCHOOL.

The splendid appearance of the eight companies of the Birmingham, Ala., High School R.O.T.C. on their last turnout of the school year occasioned an editorial of high tribute in the Birmingham News of May 20. The News used the R.O.T.C. as an argument for more school bonds. Lieut. Col. R. M. Nolan, U.S.A., retired, is P.M. S. and T. at Birmingham.

MEETING OF NEW YORK CHAPTER, THE QUARTERMASTER ASSOCIATION.

The get-together meeting of the New York Chapter, The Quartermaster Association, held at the Army and Navy Club of America at New York city May 20, was a great success. The membership turned out in large numbers to greet Major Gen. H. L. Rogers, Q.M.G. of the Army.

Others at the gathering were Brig. Gen. John M. Carson, Chief of the Construction Service, office of the Quartermaster General; Col. James A. Moss and George H. Penrose, Major R. L. Foster, Capt. George F. Unmacht and E. H. Sleeper.

Speeches were delivered by General Rogers, Colonel Hart and Colonel Moss. The chapter gained fifty new members, and Major General Rogers, referred to the enthusiasm shown by the members and expressed himself as sure that New York will reach its quota of new members before June 16.

The chapter is now preparing to celebrate the 147th anniversary of the birth of the Quartermaster Corps by holding a dinner at the Hotel Astor on June 16, and arrangements have been made with the hotel people. Every Regular Army, Reserve Corps officer and National Guard supply officer is urged to become a member of the association, and be kept up to date on matters concerning the Quartermaster Corps.

Every effort is being made to get at least 400 new members in the chapter before the date set for the annual dinner, which in every way will be as big or a bigger success than that of last year.

FIFTY CELEBRATIONS PLANNED ON QUARTERMASTER ANNIVERSARY.

Major Gen. H. L. Rogers, the Quartermaster General, in sending out a letter to the posts and stations concerning the celebration of the 147th anniversary of the birth of the Quartermaster Corps, which takes place on June 15 next, strongly recommends that the enlisted men of the corps share with the officers in the festivities.

Among other features it is suggested that a special holiday dinner be served Quartermaster Corps units on that day, and that the anniversary be otherwise fittingly observed.

General Rogers is preparing a message on the history of the corps. Wherever possible units will be assembled at some suitable hour by their officers, and the message will be read to them. Civilian employees of the corps also will share in the special observance of the day. 2D DIVISION REUNION TO BE HELD AT QUANTICO.

The third annual reunion of the famous 2d Division, which captured one-fourth of the prisoners and artillery pieces taken by the A.E.F., and suffered one-tenth of our losses in the World War, will be held at Quantico, Va., on June 6, 7 and 8. Butler, commanding the big marine post, has arranged a full program for the reunion. Dress parades, dinners, boxing bouts, baseball and other athletic contests, memorial exercises, the annual business meeting, a ball and a review comprise the major part of the exercises.

The vets will have no expenses while at Quantico, messing and bunking with their hosts. Reduced rates have been offered by the railroads.

Voice of the Services

COMMUTATION OF RATIONS.

TO THE EDITOR:

In recent orders it is stated that men on detached service will have their commutation of rations reduced for the fiscal year 1923. In view of this contemplated reduction the following observations are applicable. To further reduce the commutation of rations at the present time is nothing less than a short-sighted policy and is decidedly not for the best interests of the Army. Many unfavorable comments are being made by National Guard officers with whom the Regular Army instructors come in contact, and without exception they are opposed to seeing sergeant-instructors on duty with their organizations being made to suffer in the program of economy that is being carried out.

It is recognized that only competent men should be detailed for this class of service. To detail incompetent instructors is nothing less than a reflection on the Army, and yet this detail is so unattractive at the present time that men who had better been left with their organizations have been sent out for this work and men who know the job and give everything they have are quitting or preparing to quit the detail.

Another thing—do not forget that incompetency is recognized and at once by the very people whom these instructors are supposed to instruct, and when this happens it hurts the Army, and hurts it bad.

The system of commuting three rations for men on detached service should be changed and at once. There is not a place in this state where a man could get two fair meals a day, not to say three for a dollar a day.

Military Societies and Clubs

KALAMAZOO HAS A. AND N. CLUB.

Another new Army and Navy Club has been organized in Michigan. This makes eight that are already in operation in Michigan, and all are working jointly in the interest of the National Defense act, and to further the best interests of the Regular Army, Navy, Marine Corps, National Guard and Organized Reserves.

The new club was organized a few days ago in Kalamazoo. The meeting was called in the Park-American Hotel, and was presided over by Lieut. J. Truman Streng, who introduced Major A. D. Cowley, U.S.A., in charge of the Organized Reserves in Lansing.

Major Cowley fully explained the Army and Navy Club organizations in Michigan, and declared that had a sufficient Army and Navy existed in the United States there would have been no World War.

These officers were elected by the members of the new club: J. Truman Streng, president; Ren Verdon, first vice president; G. W. Crockett, second vice president; H. P. Manning, secretary-treasurer; Lee H. Cahill, director for three years; A. C. McIntyre, director for two years; and Lee Tucker for one year.

The following committees were appointed: Membership, Andrew Coleman and Douglas Hall; resolutions, James Murray and R. S. Talbot; entertainment, Bailey Wright; public defense, Otto Steinberger; co-operation with the Chamber of Commerce, Lee Tucker; constitution and by-laws, James Wilson, James Murray and R. S. Talbot; publicity, H. W. Bush and Douglas Hall.

Resolutions were adopted that the Army Appropriation bill be supported after adequate amendments are made to care for the necessities of the Organized Reserves, and the National Guard, and to provide for an adequate number of officers and men in the Regular Army, in accordance with recommendations of Gen. John J. Pershing; also that the new Service Pay bill be adopted, and that copies of the resolutions be prepared and forwarded to Michigan Senators and Representatives as well as Representatives in Congress from other states.

benefit of the Service, including the retired officers and men.

25TH ENGINEERS' ASSOCIATION.

Increased membership, service to their buddies and to the country, and a closer union among themselves, were matters of concern to 100 members of the National Association of 25th Engineers, in their first annual convention in St. Paul, Minn., on May 19 and 20.

Steps to have the regiment's colors brought to the state capitol here were taken. They are now in the New York state capitol. New York members of the regiment claim the majority of its personnel was recruited in that state. A resolution was passed asking The Adjutant General of the Army to settle the question.

A set of by-laws was unanimously adopted and new officers were elected: Thomas J. Conway, St. Paul, president; A. L. Rutherford, St. Paul, vice president; C. K. Interesting War Books

HISTORY OF THE 90TH DIVISION.

A History of the 90th Division in the World War by Major George Wythe, division historian, has been published by the 90th Division Association, of which Sergt. Major Arthur J. Reinhart, Dallas, Texas, is secretary. It is a valuable and interesting contribution to the history of the World War with a careful regard for facts.

The book is a handsomely printed volume of 259 pages in large type with some seventy illustrations from photographs showing the various activities of the division, both in the United States and at the battle front. This division was under command of Major Gen. Henry T. Allen, and was picked as one of the nine combat divisions in the original Army of Occupation in Germany.

The history begins with the formation of the division at Camp Travis, Texas. From there the reader is given the details of the movement of the division overseas. There are illuminating chapters on the battle period, where the 90th Division was assigned difficult missions and fulfilled every task it was called upon to perform. It took every objective, and did not yield one inch of territory gained from the enemy.

Other chapters of the history deal with the period of occupation, and the trip home. There are tables of statistics, giving casualties and material captured, lists of decorations, roster of officers, the names of those killed, wounded and missing, and of those who died from disease.

The division lost 37 officers and 1,042 men killed, 82 officers and 1,257 men wounded, 123 officers and 4,671 men slightly wounded, 81 officers and 2,094 men gassed and 7 officers and 336 men missing and captured.

Several interesting books dealing with the experiences of individuals and organizations in the World War have been received by the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL. Among them is one entitled "In Service," by Brig. Gen. S. H. Wolfe, which is a record of General Wolfe's war service.

Another is entitled "Major Connelly's Front Line Fighters, France and Belgium." This gives the splendid record of the 1st Battalion, 148th Infantry, 37th Division.

1. The Secretary of War directs that you inform all regimental and post commanders under your command of the general orders issued by the War Department on Nov. 2, 1916, in regard to pledges of officers to abstain from the use of alcoholic beverages, drugs, etc., which were as follows:

"It is the desire of the Department that the policy which has existed in some commands of accepting pledges from officers to abstain from the use of alcoholic beverages, drugs, etc., in lieu of disciplinary measures, be discontinued. It is thought disciplinary measures should hereafter be applied in the case of officers who commit themselves to the extent to warrant exaction or acceptance of a pledge."

2. This policy has not been modified and is still in force. The effect of the above instructions will not, however, be to cancel any outstanding pledges.

By order of the Corps Area Commander:

H. G. BISHOP, Chief of Staff.

ARE YOU READY?

The purpose of the Army and Navy Journal's new I. D. R. is to assist you in getting ready to become a drill instructor.

The presentation of the subject is unique, having the following decided advantages over similar publications:

1. It tells, for the first time, how to become a successful drill instructor, or what methods are used by our most successful drill instructors. This chapter alone is well worth the cost of the book.

2. It explains each movement with two things in view: First, to assist the beginner; and second, to assist the instructor. 272 illustrations are used. Both correct and incorrect ways (common errors) of doing movements are shown.

3. Part of the I. D. R. is omitted and the rest logically rearranged so that it will be easy for the beginner and helpful to the instructor.

4. It contains a short chapter on courtesy, with numerous illustrations.

STANDARDS OF PHYSICAL EXAMINATION FOR MEMBERS OF NATIONAL GUARD AIR SERVICE UNITS FOR FLYING STATUS.

Cir. 89, May 11, 1922, W.D.

This circular announces the policies governing the special physical examination of certain commissioned and enlisted personnel of National Guard Air Service.

The object of the examination prescribed is to select for flying duty only such officers and enlisted men as are physically and mentally qualified for such duty, and to remove promptly from flying duty those who may become temporarily or permanently unfitted for flying because of physical or mental defects.

No person will be assigned, commissioned or enlisted for duty as a pilot or as an observer, or be permitted to pilot any aircraft issued to the National Guard, until he shall have successfully passed the physical examination prescribed. Officers or enlisted men whose training and instructions require them to participate regularly and frequently in aerial flights, but who have failed to pass a physical examination prescribed, will under no circumstances be permitted to act as pilots or observers, or to take flying training, until they shall have qualified physically in the manner prescribed.

Re-examination of all pilots and observers, and of those undergoing flying training, will be made in January and July of each year. Such re-examination of any individual will also be made to determine his physical fitness to continue flying duty or flying training, whenever considered necessary.

Persons who formerly held the rating of pilot or observer in the Army of the United States, or who are licensed pilots, will be subjected to the examination prescribed, unless they present satisfactory evidence that they have passed such examination within six months of the date on which flight or training is desired.

Where National Guard Air Service units are located near Regular Army flying fields, or in the vicinity of posts or camps where other Regular Army medical officers qualified to make the physical examination are on duty, the examination will ordinarily be made by Regular Army flight surgeons, or by other medical officers qualified to make Air Service examinations, without expense to the Government.

Where the National Guard Air Service units are located at points remote from Regular Army flying fields, posts or camps, where examinations may be conducted, the medical officers of the National Guard Medical Corps attached to the National Guard unit who has satisfactorily completed the course at a school for flight surgeons will be required to make the physical examinations of the personnel of the unit to which he is attached.

Schools for flight surgeons.—Medical officers of the National Guard assigned or attached to Air Service units may be sent to schools for flight surgeons, under the provisions of regulations governing the National Guard pertaining to attendance of National Guard officers at service schools, etc.

COAST GUARD NOTES.

A circular letter is being prepared with reference to target practice (short-range battle practice). The general system will probably be based on the practice for gunboats in the Navy, as outlined in Gunner's Instructions, 1920.
The graduating exercises at the Coast Guard Academy were held May 15. Seven line cadets and two cadet engineers were graduated. The principal address, delivered by Lieut. Comdr. R. O. Crisp, was a review of the history of the Coast Guard.
Col. Edward Clifford, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, took this occasion to pay his first visit to the Academy. His address to the graduating class was brief but very much to the point. Certificates of graduation were delivered by Capt. Commandant W. E. Reynolds.

The order of standing of the cadets is as follows: Line—A. M. Martinson, R. J. Mauserman, E. H. Fritzsche, R. C. Jewell, G. E. McCabe, L. H. Baker, H. E. Grogan, Engineering—M. J. Bergen, H. A. Snyder.

A competitive examination for appointment of cadets and cadet engineers in the Coast Guard will be held, commencing June 26, at Boston, New London, New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Norfolk, Savannah, Key West, Mobile, Galveston, Buffalo, Detroit, Chicago, Fort Stanton, San Francisco, Seattle, and such other places as may be designated.

The Coast Guard Depot has just completed a thirty-foot semi-speed boat, V-bottom type, with a raised trunk cabin and a large open cockpit. The beam of the boat is seven feet, draws two feet eight inches of water, and is equipped with a fifty horsepower Wisconsin engine engined under the cabin. The controls are mounted on the after-bulkhead of the cabin, making the boat a one-man control. This boat is to be used for life-saving purposes and will probably be stationed on the lakes.

22d Infantry Farewell.

Saturday, May 27, was a field day for the 22d as marking the beginning of a series of farewell functions in view of the approaching departure of this regiment, which has been stationed at Fort Jay since the spring of 1917, the 22d having the distinction of having performed the first overt act of the war in having seized all the German ships in the harbor and interned their crews early in the morning of April 8, 1917. During the war, 1917-1918, the 22d performed very important work in guarding Government property in New York and elsewhere, stimulating enlistment, raising funds for the prosecution of the war, etc. In view of the approaching departure of the regiment, May 27 was set aside as a day for the enlisted men's enjoyment. In the afternoon there was a baseball game between the 22d and Mitchell Field, in which the score was 6 to 5 in favor of Fort Jay. Following the game, the various companies served elaborate suppers, at which the officers of the battalion and others were guests as well as the wives, sisters and friends of the men. The mess halls in each company were elaborately decorated and music and other features enlivened the occasion.

The menu of Company I will serve as an illustration of the kind of supper given throughout the battalion. Relishes: Celery, olives, pickles. Fruit: cocktail, cosmopolitan (cup). Roast chicken, roast pork, cranberry and apple sauce, New peas, boiled potatoes, with string beans, butter sauce. Salad—lettuce and stuffed tomatoes. Dessert—Neapolitan ice cream, chocolate layer cake. Coffee, cheese and crackers, fruit and nuts; cigars and cigarettes, grape juice and ginger punch; Parker House rolls, bread and butter.

After the suppers in the companies, all adjourned to Warehouse 9, where a dance took place, enlivened by a vaudeville show, all under the charge of Chaplain Dinesen. The grand march was led by Colonel Faison. Among other events to mark the departure of the 22d, a reception for the officers and ladies is announced to be given by the officers and ladies of the Quadrangle (Old Fort Jay) in the Quadrangle on Thursday evening, June 1.

The Eclipse of American Seapower

By Captain Dudley W. Knox,
U. S. N., Retired

The American Version

In this book Captain Knox, who is one of the foremost naval experts in the country, presents the American version of the Arms Conference and relates facts that ought to have been given the widest publicity at the time in order that the American people might know what the results of the Conference really would mean to them.

It is a brief and concise analysis of the results of the Arms Conference treaties and points out the absolute necessity of America's maintaining her treaty navy at the utmost point of efficiency.

This book gives, for the first time, the American viewpoint of the International agreements reached at the Conference. Captain Knox, without prejudice or bias, points out just what each nation gained or lost and proves that the United States sacrificed more than any other nation.

Tactics

The practical art of leading troops in war, teaching a simple, definite system of tactics based on the experiences of war. The method used is that known as "the applicatory system," in which we proceed in each case from theory to actual illustrations and demonstrations, and thence to problems, tests and examination. The text covers in detail the tactics of infantry and its auxiliary weapons, with a general survey of the operations of other arms. The duties of the leaders of the combat units and the manner in which they perform these duties in various situations are explained and illustrated. This is the latest treatise on tactics and no military man in any arm of the Service should be without it.

WANTED

Ten Real He-Men With Grit, Determination and the Will to Succeed

are wanted by an organization that has grown from an idea originated about eight years ago to a large, substantial institution occupying nearly two entire floors in a large Fifth Avenue Building with a force of nearly one hundred persons, plus branch offices in some of the largest Cities in the country.

The ten men selected will be men who have made good in their business life; men who are proven salesmen, and who have sufficient confidence in themselves to operate on a basis where their compensation will depend upon their ability and energy.

They will have to be men who can be depended upon to make good in their own territories where they will have to rely a great deal upon their own initiative, and who can be depended upon to devote business hours to business. They will have to employ and train a selling force and keep that force producing.

The opportunity is really unusual. The men who are accepted will, regardless of their former experiences, have to spend time in training and learning our work.

While it is not absolutely essential, yet those who have been Officers in the Army and Navy can by the very nature of our work more easily adapt themselves to it.

The men engaged will actually be building up a business for themselves. It is a real opportunity and only real, earnest, ambitious men of good education, experience and address will be selected.

Write full details of your past work and experience, your age, reason for wishing to leave your present work, your average income by your own efforts and all other details that will assist us in forming an opinion.

Address Box 51 Army and Navy Journal

Questions and Answers

Questions having to do with military or naval matters will be answered in this department as soon as possible after their receipt, or, lacking space, by mail, provided a stamped, self-addressed envelope is sent. Communications must in all cases be signed, giving the correct name and address of the inquirer.

J. T. C.—No progress has been made in Congress with a bill proposing to give the pay of warrant officer, retired, to all retired enlisted men who held commissions in the World War. J. B.—Color sergeant, retired, will come in third grade—pay of $90, or $67.50 plus $15.75, total $83.25.

PETERS.—By reference to A.R. 134 you will note that for computation of time for retirement at thirty years, Philippine foreign service was counted from time of arrival at first port of call in Philippine waters to departure from last port of call there. See A.R. 134.

W. B. S. asks: Does an officer who resigns, or who is honorably discharged from the Service, receive travel pay for his dependents to his bona fide home or place of entering the Army? Answer: He does not; the travel pay for dependents is payable on permanent change of station, but not on termination of service.

M. J. E.—The 3d Infantry Regiment was organized in 1784, while the 1st Infantry Regiment was organized in 1791.

SERGEANT H. M. B.—If you have knowledge as to the whereabouts of the pistol and can make affidavit as to its serial number being the one that you paid for, make affidavits in triplicate, forward a full statement of the facts to the Chief of Ordnance, Washington, D.C., and ask that he advise procedure to be followed.

J. B.—There is no change in the allowances for retired enlisted men—$15.75. The pay would be three-fourths of active, plus the allowances. Color sergeant is in third grade; total retired.

SUBSCRIBER.—According to the National Defense act, Sec. 48, warrant officers other than those of the Army Mine Planter Service receive base pay of $1,230 a year, and the allowances of a second lieutenant. The new Pay bill increases the warrant officers' base pay, but since there is no mention of a repeal of allowances there is every reason to believe that their allowances will be those of second lieutenants, as shown on page 893, May 30. This, of course, applies only to the active list, as retired officers do not receive allowances.

W. E. L. asks: A claims that double time commences from the day of departure from the U.S. B., that it commences from the day of arrival in Manila. Which is correct? Answer: There is no more double time in any enlistments beginning after Aug. 24, 1912. Time at sea was not counted double. See A.R. 134.

A. B. B. asks: (1) Is there now before either house of Congress any measure that has for its object the removal of the existing restrictions on the private employment of retired naval officers? (2) Is there now before either house any measure that will give retired officers any share of the "allowances" of their grade? (3) Will retired officers receive any benefit from the Pay bill now pending?

Answer: (1) A bill was introduced, but not yet passed. Watch action on Naval Appropriation bill, personnel features, where Senate may add the provision you mention. (2) A bill was introduced, but has made no progress on account of the attention centered upon the Service Pay bill. (3) Their authorized percentages will apply to the new active rates, but no benefit in the allowances.

R. A. H.—The maximum longevity increase for warrant officers and enlisted men is twenty-five per cent. (five per cent. each four years). The active pay of warrant officer under the new pay bill will be $148 base; for over twenty years' service add twenty-five per cent., making $185, three-fourths of which is $138.75, for retired pay.

DECISIONS OF THE COMPTROLLER GENERAL

A period of service terminated by desertion and not again resumed, as well as a period of service terminated by dishonorable discharge pursuant to sentence of court-martial, according to the Comptroller General, may be counted for an enlisted man's longevity credit, as those enlistments were not fraudulent at inception; but a period of service entered by fraudulent enlistment, though otherwise honest and faithful, and notwithstanding subsequent action of the Government in accepting such service and permitting the soldier to again enlist, cannot be counted towards his longevity, for "no statute is known which authorizes any officer of the Government to retroactively denounce that lawful which the law itself has declared unlawful."

An officer of the Navy who was provided with quarters for himself, wife and children on the Naval Station, Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, maintained quarters for his parents at Odessa, Fla., and asked for commutation under the act of April 10, 1916, on account of his dependent parents. The Comptroller General says that the act of 1916 did not contemplate more than one abode for the officer's family or dependents. If the Government furnishes an abode for the officer's wife, child or dependent parent, then no right to commutation accrues.

"Reserve officers on active duty are not entitled to have their dependents transported by the Government from their homes to the first station and from their last station to their homes," according to an opinion of the A.G., in which the Comptroller General concurs. This decision was rendered in the case of Reserve officers detailed to duty in the War Department General Staff. Such detail does not represent a permanent change of station, for which the law authorizes change of station allowances.

An officer of the Air Service had orders to ferry an airplane from Mitchell Field to Dayton, Ohio. He made a stopover at Bolling Field, D.C., although there is no showing in his papers that the stop-over was authorized or necessary. He presents a claim for transfer of himself and his baggage by taxicab from a hotel in Washington to Bolling Field. The Comptroller General disallows for three reasons: Absence of a showing of authority or necessity for delay in the continuous voyage; failure to show any other payments for same date for determination whether limit of $8 per day is exceeded; if officer had telephoned to Bolling Field a Government conveyance would have been sent to meet him in Washington.

If an officer be legally liable for the necessities of a grandchild, says the Comptroller General, it nevertheless does not broaden the class of those who are termed children in the act of May 18, 1920, providing for transportation of dependents. So much of the decision of the Comptroller, Dec. 27, 1920, as included grandchildren within the benefits of the act will not be hereafter followed.

In determining the right of the Service Company, 101st Infantry, Massachusetts N.D., to armory drill pay for assemblies of the company, exclusive of the band, the Comptroller General says: "The band is an 'organizational unit' within the meaning of Sec. 110, N.D.A. . . . No officers have any duties to perform with respect to the band other than the captain and his duties are only supervision of routine administrative details and discipline. It is apparent that it is that part of the Service Company exclusive of the band, where the officers have some duties to perform, that constitutes the organization sixty per cent. of whose enlisted strength must attend and participate in drills."

An enlisted man of the Navy is entitled to a discharge at expiration of enlistment, but the mere expiration of his enlistment does not operate to release him from the Service. If a man is retained after expiration of his enlistment waiting action on a court-martial his pay status continues unaffected thereby until promulgation of the sentence, says the Comptroller General.
